It Is Different in France The Crime Passionate The Wife of the Grocer Want Corpses? Find Them

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

In Europe, English, French, German, Italian or Czecho-Slovakian will believe anything you say about American crime. And that is hardly surprising.

The heading, "Chicago Politician Dies Under Hail of Racketeers' Bullets," surprises nobody. There might be mild surprise if the heading read, "Chicago Politician Does NOT Die Under Hail of Racketeers' Bullets."

The late President Grevy, of France, long since dead, once said to this writer:

"My young friend, when I was very young I wanted to go to America. But I read that a man in St. Louis went into a barber shop to have his hair cut. Instead of cutting his hair, they pressed a button, dropped him and his barber chair into the cellar, cut his throat and took his money. Investigating further, I found that was a common occurrence. I decided not to go to the United States, and so, you see, I am president of the French Republic."

We excel all Europe in the number of our murders and other crimes as we excel the whole world in the number of our automobiles.

But in variety, whether in crime or in automobiles, Europe surpasses anything that the United States ever imagined.

There are qualities about criminal proceedings in France unknown to us in America. The criminal is always highly indignant, AMAZED that anybody should think it possible for him to be guilty of a crime.

One giant murderer, since condemned, an athlete of unusual power, had murdered a lady whom the French reporters baptised La Danseuse Blonde. When the evidence against him becomes overwhelming, the criminal endeavors to make his defense appear what the French call un crime passionel, "a crime of passion." He says, "Je l'aimais; je l'ai tue." "I loved her, I killed her." A sympathetic juror—no women are in the jury box—is expected to understand and say to himself, "Ha, I might have done the same thing myself."

But, in France, that combination judge and prosecutor, well called the juge d'instruction, says: "Yes, you loved her without doubt, but why did you steal her two thousand francs that she had accumulated by her aesthetic dancing?"

That punctures the crime passionel, for in crimes of passion you are supposed never to steal the lady's savings. The criminal's dramatic statement, "Je l'aimais; Je l'ai tue." "I loved her; I killed her," does not save the killer of the Danseuse Blonde.

A charmingly naive crime headline in a French paper reads: Le Pharmacien M.-Ul Fait Mourier La Femme de l'Epicier, meaning literally translated, "The Druggist, Has He Caused to Die the Wife of the Grocer?"

The honest grocer wants 75,000 francs for himself and 20,000 francs for his daughter, because his wife died after being treated by the accused, Henri Schmidt, who used to be a member of the Chamber of Deputies, but took up healing the sick as a more profitable business, unfortunately for him, without a doctor's license to kill or cure.

Rebuked by the judge for his failure to get a doctor's degree, the former deputy indignantly replies, "Remember, Monsieur Le Juge, that the great Pasteur himself had no doctor's degree and he cured the whole world of many things. I only cure cancer, but how I do it is my secret."

It developed that the former Deputy Schmidt diagnosed the illnesses of his patients by causing the pendulum of a clock to swing back and forth above a letter written by the patient. The pendulum tells him what is the matter with the person that has written the letter. We have not yet developed that in America.

On the other hand, you may say for French justice that it is swift justice. A man is acquitted or convicted within a week or ten days.

Also, there is a defiant tone about the French criminal that almost inspires respect. When Monsieur Martin, who lives in the "Cadavre," is asked by the judge, "What became of the bodies of those two men?" Monsieur Martin replies, addressing the courtroom generally, S'ils veulent des cadavres qu'ils les trouvent, meaning, "If they want corpses, let them find them."

They do find one of them, promptly, in Mr. Martin's garden, packed away in cement, which immediately causes that crime to become un crime a l'Americaine.

Baby's Nurse Named

EX-MANVILLE SWEETHEART CALLED THORPE'S GUEST

Los Angeles, July 30 (US)—Details of "breakfast in bed" parties assertedly involving Dr. Franklyn Thorpe with four women, two of them striking blondes, were related from the witness stand in superior court in a night session in a sensational phase of Mary Astor's fight to regain custody of her daughter, Marilyn, 4.

Dr. Thorpe was painted as a gay Lothario who entertained beautiful women at his Toluca Lake home by Miss Nellie Anderson, little Marilyn's nurse.

Miss Anderson was called as a witness for the film star by Attorney Roland R. Woolley in an effort to prove the environment at the home of Miss Astor's former husband. Dr. Thorpe, is not a proper one in which to rear her child, Woolley asked the witness:

"Did you ever see Miss Norma Taylor at Dr. Thorpe's home while the baby was living with him as you were her nurse?"

FREQUENT VISITOR

Miss Anderson replied:

"Yes, she was a frequent visitor."

"Did she ever stay overnight?"

"Many times."

"In what bedroom did she sleep?"

"In the same bedroom with the

Gilead, Me., July 30 — Posses totaling 600 persons today engaged in a search for a new-made woodland grave, convinced that Mrs. Sarah W. Staples, missing since Tuesday, was a victim of foul play.

Subsequent search, which covered a five-mile area, failed to produce a single clue and as no trace of

SECRET MOVE PLANNED FOR SHERMAN

Even as Governor Curley's decision was awaited in the case of Newell P. Sherman, condemned "American Tragedy" slayer, defense counsel were engaged on a surprise move today.

That much was definite, it was learned in Worcester, where Attorneys J. Fred Humes and William W. Buckley have their offices.

What was the nature of the last-minute defense plan and in what court the lawyers would make their appeal yet remained to be learned.

Both counsellors left Worcester secretly and no word was heard from them for hours afterwards. It was believed in Worcester that they had gone to Boston or, possibly, one might have flown to Washington.

DEBATES FATE

The governor's decision, following a passionate plea by Sherman's parents that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment, was expected momentarily.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sherman, the parents, made their pleas to the governor yesterday. And the governor listened in his private

Police Welcome! McSweeney Honeymoon Pair Home

Police Commissioner McSweeney turned out a large wedge of the department today to greet his son and daughter-in-law returning from their honeymoon.

With two sergeants, six patrolmen wearing white gloves, a plain-clothes detail and a special traffic squad in charge of Captain John O'Dea, the commissioner met the S. S. Boston, bearing the happy couple from New York.

The traffic squad, working with a neat efficiency, cleared that section of Atlantic avenue in the vicinity of the dock, and 100 sulky taxi drivers, on hand to pick up debarking passengers, were permitted no closer than three blocks from the pier entrance.

While the taxi drivers were saying "Fudge!" "Darn it!" and "The very dickens!" and manipulators of stalled trucks were giving voice to similar trite expressions of annoyance, the commissioner boarded the steamer and greeted the young folks.

Beaming, his arms around them, he descended the gangplank between rows of detectives and the trio was whisked away in the McSweeney limousine, closely followed by the members of the force.

The returning couple, Eugene M. McSweeney, Jr., and the former Anna McGrath, were married July 15 and have been on a honeymoon trip to the West Indies.

Boston Doctor's Wife Robbed of $12,000 Jewels

Kennebunkport, Me., July 30—Theft of $12,000 worth of jewels from the summer home here of Dr. George H. Powers, of Boston, was reported to police today.

Mrs. Powers discovered the theft when she found her bedroom ransacked. The box in which the jewelry had been locked was smashed to bits.

The theft was reported to Chief of Police Thomas Wescott by Dr. Powers. State police immediately began an investigation. Fingerprints were found on several pieces of furniture.

The missing jewelry included a diamond-studded ring and diamond bracelet, a pearl necklace and a diamond-studded ring and diamond-set pin.

The theft was believed to have been effected while Dr. and Mrs. Powers were on the beach. When they returned Mrs. Powers discovered the theft. Servants who had remained at the house said they heard no noise.

Dr. Powers makes his Boston home in Beacon street, Back Bay.

Northern Spanish rebel army headquarters, Burgos (By Courier to French Frontier), July 30—Spain's White and Red struggle today was in a sanguinary deadlock on a front extending clear across the peninsula, and while the Whites in their headquarters here claimed small but significant advances, terror has gripped the populations behind the lines on both sides.

Executions are now the order of the day in this civil war, which more than ever resembles the first phases of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia when Kornilov's White troops were advancing on Red Petrograd.

Prisoners are being put up against the wall and shot, and in many sectors no quarter is given or asked.

OLYMPIC GROUP OUSTS JAHNCKE

Berlin, July 30 (AP)—The International Olympic Committee today ousted Ernest Lee Jahncke of New Orleans, elected Avery Brundage of Chicago as his successor and then considered the leading bids of Japan and Finland to hold the 1940 Olympic games.

Officially it was said Jahncke was dropped for failure to attend two meetings.

However, it was recalled that the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy opposed American participation if the games were to be held in Germany, while Brundage, as president of the American Olympic committee, led a successful fight against the boycott movement.

Although Japan was believed to have the inside track for the games four years hence, Finland's representatives engaged in some strenuous lobbying to hold the games at Helsingfors. The Japanese present-

NEW DEAL FOE TO LIBERAL BELIEFS, SAYS WHITE

MILITANT G. O. P. PARTY HOPE OF NEW PHILOSOPHIES

By LUTHER CONANT, JR.

York, Me., July 30—The militant liberalism of the rejuvenated Republican party keynoted the speeches here today of the G. O. P. whirlwind group.

U. S. Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., candidate for re-election and Secretary of State Lewis C. Barrows, gubernatorial nominee, hailed the presence on the ticket of James C. Oliver of South Portland, Townsendite and Father Coughlin endorsed candidate, and winner of the G. O. P. nomination from the first congressional district.

Oliver followed with a ringing plea for his supporters to unite behind the straight Republican ticket.

"I want to say to you," he declared, "that I believe sincerely that the New Deal is the greatest enemy to the liberal doctrines we advocate.

"I want to say further that the Republican Party and the Republican ticket offers you and me, the masses of the people, the greatest hope of bringing to realization those philosophies of relief and social justice that we advocate."

CITES GAG RULE

He urged friends of these two movements to unite behind the Republican ticket for three prime reasons. These, he explained, are the enforcement by the New Deal of "gag rule" in Congress; the "persecution" of Dr. Townsend in a recent congressional inquiry, which he said was inspired by James G. Farley, "the Crown Prince of the New Deal," and the attempted passage of the Smith anti-lobby bill, which he said would have "prevented ordinary citizens from holding public assemblies without registering at Washington as lobbyists."

"A vote for the New Deal," he concluded, "is a vote for the continuation of these un-American and subversive practices. The Republican ticket has candidates liberal enough and a platform broad enough to merit the support of all liberals. On this basis I urge those of my friends who believe with me and in me to vote the Republican ticket."

Senator White joined with Oliver in an appeal for common support, declaring that members of both parties should unite in this combat against the un-American policies advocated and already in many places placed in practice by the New Deal.

SCORES DEAL POLICIES

"I have no hesitation in asking Democrats to join with us, for both the Republicans and Democrats believe in the fundamental principles of American government, the sanctity of the Constitution, the preservation of American rights and liberties guaranteed us under that Constitution.

"We have seen the President take into his own hands power delegated by the Constitution to branches of government other than the executive. We have seen him issue decrees, fix taxation set up by presidential decree alone, agencies that have carried out programs and policies as foreign to our system of government as those programs being carried out in certain European countries which we have no reason to envy."

Senator White pointed to the huge expenditures of the New Deal for relief and to administration promises to relieve unemployment, then declared that "relief is based on a strictly sectional or partisan basis" and that unemployment today "is as great as it was four years ago."

Barrows cited the national debt of 34 billions as a burden that soon will be felt by every taxpayer. He said a "parallel for the national situation could be found right here in this state, where we are spending money far beyond our income."

"Such a policy," said Mr. Barrows, "must stop unless our government is to repudiate its obligations and throw the nation into chaos and dictatorship."

Mr. Barrows, concluding a summary of the anti-New Deal issue, told hearers Maine would be in the nation's spotlight in September.

"We must elect the entire Republican ticket, for the success of a single Democratic candidate would be interpreted as an endorsement of the New Deal. Remember that no Democratic nominee in Maine is other than an avowed New Dealer."

Also speaking were Miss Marion E. Martin, of Bangor, National committeewoman and Mrs. Leon M. Day, of Portland, vice-chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Sewall Beginning New Maine Tour

Augusta, Me., July 30—Arthur E. Sewall, chairman of the Republican State Committee, has left today for a three-day trip through Washington County to make arrangements for the G. O. P. whirlwind tour there August 10 and 11.

Chairman Sewall said that he would confer with party leaders in that area and urge them to make an intensive registration drive.

MAINE POSSES HUNT GRAVE

It was felt that if Mrs. Staples had met with an accident the dog would have returned home.

LAST SEEN TUESDAY

She was last seen on Tuesday by Bobby Curtis, 11, and Donald Breggegp, 14, with her dog in a field bordering the woods in the vicinity of a tent occupied by Fred Taylor, a government worker engaged in clearing timber in this vicinity.

Search fanning out from that point, and including the banks of the Androscoggin river, proved fruitless and today the searchers, including 200 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, were ordered to turn over debris and survey dirt in suspected places.

THEORY OF MURDER

High Sheriff William Frothingham and his son, Chief Deputy William Frothingham, were convinced that if Mrs. Staples was alive, even if lying injured as the result of an accident, she would already have been found. Her attire suggested that she did not anticipate going any distance from her cottage, or being gone any length of time.

The murder theory first gained credence when Attorney-General Clyde Chapman entered the case.

Chapman, after a lengthy conference with Sheriff Frothingham of South Paris, is on a mysterious mission today with County Solicitor Walls in the woods.

Chapman indicated his belief the woman had been slain and that her body was disposed of either by hasty burial or in the Androscoggin river.

TO DRAG RIVER

It was planned to start dragging the river waters today in addition to continuing the search in the woodland area near her summer cottage.

Walls in the neighborhood are also to be examined in the belief the woman's body may have been disposed of in this manner.

A shepherd dog is to be used by the searchers in the belief the animal might pick up her trail although Tuesday night's rain, it is feared, will prevent this.

STAPLES BREAKS DOWN

Captain Staples, breaking down after two night without sleep—and apologizing for it—said he had abandoned hope that his wife would be found alive.

They were married 32 years ago and have no children.

"During that time we have been pals. We never had a quarrel, she is still my sweetheart," he said.

"I have investigated numerous cases of a similar nature, but I never thought it would happen to me."

He has been a member of the force in Auburn, 40 miles away, for 22 years, the last four years as captain and senior member of the department.

OFFER REWARD

Auburn officials called him today to say they were offering a $200 reward for clues to Mrs. Staples' whereabouts, alive or dead.

Captain Staples said his wife's little brown dog was deeply fond of her and would probably be barking by her side if she fell in the woods or otherwise suffered an injury. Because the adjoining territory ha sbeen so thoroughly searched without trace of either the woman or the dog, he said he was forced to conclude that both were dead.

Many motored here from Auburn to join the search. These included firemen and police comrades on their days off.

Straw Vote Trend

Leads Lengthen For G.O.P. Men

MASSACHUSETTS

Democratic candidates in Massachusetts for United States senator and for governor gained a sliver of ground in the 16th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot, but their Republican rivals remained far out in front.

Although Lawrence and her neighboring town went for Governor Curley, Democratic senatorial aspirant, and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic candidate for governor, mail votes cut down their advantages considerably.

The tabulated mail showed 41 votes for Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican candidate for the Senate, as against only one for Curley, and 46 votes for John W. Haigis, Republican gubernatorial aspirant, to but one for Hurley.

For United States Senator:

Lodge	4239

For Governor:

Haigis	4403
Hurley	3248

Today the Massachusetts straw ballot car is in Lowell, Andover, Haverhill and vicinity. Watch for it, and vote!

MAINE

More repetition and more gains were marked up for Republican candidates for United States senator and governor in Maine during the 16th day of the Boston Evening American -SundayAdvertiser straw ballot.

The Democratic-New Deal candidates, Governor Louis J. Brann for senator and F. Harold Dubord for governor, trailed once more in the balloting while their Republican opponents, Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., for senator, and Lewis O. Barrows for governor, piled up new advantages.

Thus far the Maine standing is as follows:

For United States Senator:

White	2747.
Brann	2166.

For Governor:

Barrows	8362.
Dubord	1657.

On the 16th day of sounding out sentiment the vote was taken in Augusta, with White being given 162 votes, Brann 105, Barrows 178 and Dubord 89.

Today the Maine straw ballot car is in Bangor and vicinity, but if you miss it you may mark the ballot appearing in this newspaper and mail your vote.

KNOX ACCEPTS HONOR TONIGHT

to be the most momentous and memorable national contest since Lincoln's day. Colonel Knox himself will carry the brunt of the stump speaking which will take him to every section of the country.

STAGE ALL SET

The stage is all set for the colorful proceedings tonight, at which party notables from every state and all territories will join with Chicago in acclaiming Governor Alfred M. Landon's running mate.

A vibrant audience of more than 50,000, it was estimated by Chauncey McCormick, chairman of the citizens' committee, will participate in the demonstration, with approximately 25,000 jamming the stadium and the other throngs occupying temporary platforms and open spaces adjacent to the hall. Millions throughout the country will listen to the address over the radio.

Ample provision has been made to carry the speaking program to those on the outside.

The entertainment program, which starts at 7:30 p. m. and continues until 9 o'clock, also will be carried to the folks on the outside.

Meantime, the four big parades will converge on the stadium in the early evening. More than 8000 will participate in this feature, with virtually every group in Chicago represented.

The speaking will start about 9 o'clock, or a little before, in order to put Colonel Knox on the air at 10 o'clock.

HAYES FIRST

Chauncey McCormick, who has directed the major work of preparing the setting for the festivities, will thump down with his gavel after the entertainment features have been put on, and will first introduce Edward A. Hayes, Illinois manager of the Knox pre-convention campaign.

Hayes will introduce John M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National committee, who will present Senator Frederick Steiwer, chairman of the National Notification committee, who, in turn, will introduce Colonel Knox.

Hamilton says he will take "about half a minute" and didn't know when he would put down his few words on paper. "If at all." It was recalled that at the Landon notification Hamilton didn't get around to doing this work until during the parade and then hastily sketched his message.

The inter-denominational spirit of the demonstration will be emphasized by participation of three of the city's leading churchmen—the Most Rev. William O'Brien, auxiliary bishop of Chicago; the Rev. John Timothy Stone, fourth Presbyterian Church, and Rabbi Felix Levy of Congregation Emanuel.

GIRL, 8, DRAWS BEST SKETCH OF LANDON

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Governor Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for President, is soon to receive a pencil sketch of himself drawn by little Miss Angela De Filippo, eight years of age, patient at the Essex County Sanatorium in Middleton.

President Edwin F. Parker, of the Landon for President Club of Massachusetts, to whom the drawing was originally submitted before transmitting it to Topeka, declared it to be the best likeness of the Kansas governor that he has yet seen.

Parker, delighted with the gift, said it is another sign of the great appeal which Governor Landon's candidacy is making both to the young and old throughout the country. He was told, he said, that the little De Filippo girl had worked on the sketch for almost four weeks.

RECEIVES THANKS

"We have received the splendid drawing of Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, the next President of the United States, which you have executed with most unusual artistic ability.

"We will notify Governor Landon of the interest you have shown in his candidacy and will see to it that the drawing is forwarded to him. Pending direct word from him we wish you to know how pleased we are with it.

"We are sure that Governor Landon personally will be greatly elated because we have not seen a more natural likeness produced by anyone.

"With best wishes for your good health and happiness, Sincerely yours, (Sgd) Edwin F. Parker."

Among prominent Massachusetts Republican leaders planning to visit Governor Landon in Topeka is Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Nahant.

LODGE GOING WEST

Lodge, Republican nominee of the state convention for United States senator, plans to leave for Topeka the first immediately following the first big Republican rally and outing next Saturday in Essex County. A date for the appointment has been arranged with Governor Landon for Monday morning.

The Women's Republican Club, of Milton, has prepared a big birthday cake for presentation to John W. Haigis, Republican nominee for governor, on his 55th birthday, tomorrow.

The cake, now on display at the Haigis-for-Governor headquarters, 11 Beacon street, will be taken to Greenfield tomorrow morning and presented to Mr. Haigis at 9 a. m.

The candidate, with his two daughters, and brother and sister, will then journey to Bradford, N. H., where they will picnic with the candidate's son, a junior counsellor at a local boys' camp.

The Republican Club of Plymouth, on the Cape, has expressed a wish to enroll its entire membership of 60 into the Landon-for-President Club.

BRANN EVADES CAMPAIGN FOR NEW DEAL

New York, July 30 (US)—Facing a bitter fight in his senatorial campaign, Gov. Louis J. Brann, of Maine, made it clear today he will avoid "New Deal" issues if possible until after the September elections.

Gov. Brann, who was persuaded to make the race for the Senate by President Roosevelt, was scheduled to be one of the Democratic governors heard on the radio Tuesday night in criticism of Gov. Landon's acceptance speech.

At the last minute the Maine governor, who has many friends among staunch Maine Republicans, notified the Democratic National Committee he would not be available. Gov. Green, of Rhode Island, was hastily substituted.

National Chairman Farley would not comment on Gov. Brann's withdrawal from the program. Told at his press conference that Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Republican national campaign leader in the east, had called attention to the absence of Gov. Brann, the Democratic chieftain said:

"The speeches were delivered by six governors definitely decided upon to make them."

If he is to do any campaigning for the "New Deal" this fall, it is now considered a certainty Governor Brann will insist that he have no speaking dates until after 8 September. His campaigns in Maine will be fought on strictly local issues.

Gov. Brann Declines To Make Comment

Portland, Me., July 30 (US)—When Governor Brann's attention was called today to a New York report that he would refrain from participating as far as possible in the campaign to aid the "New Deal" he refused to comment.

Today's Boon-Doggle

Convinced that the farmers of Las Animas County will somehow manage to weather droughts and floods without any governmental aid, the Works Progress Administration is working industriously to improve the fair grounds at Trinidad in order that the triumphant agriculturalists may foregather there in congenial surroundings and display the fruit of their labors.

Moreover, the Works Progress Administration will do the job with a thoroughness characteristic of the New Deal. It will improve the fair grounds once at a cost of $2,797; improve them again at a cost of $4385; and improve them for a third and last time at a cost of $25,300, according to the announcements of its press bureau.

The improvements call for the painting of buildings and grand stands, the construction of a new barn, and the erection of 5000 linear feet of wall, presumably for no better purpose than to keep out the local one-eyed Connellys.

Police Halt Swimming Where Sisters Drowned

GIRL HEROINE LOSES LIFE

Drowning of two small sisters in the deep water of the Charles river at Newton Upper Falls caused police today to bar children henceforth from swimming within 100 yards of the spot.

It was under Echo Bridge, in the river section known as Hemlock Gorge, that 5-year-old Alice Horrigan died and her 8-year-old sister, Phyllis, died with her in a vain attempt at rescue.

The girls' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Horrigan of Boylston street, Newton Upper Falls.

Children have always been forbidden to play in the gorge, authorities stated, but now they are forbidden to even approach it.

PLUNGES TO AID

The Horrigan girls, in bathing suits, were paddling about the water near the gorge while a companion, 6-year-old Natalie Cronin of Ellis street, Newton Upper Falls, looked on.

Suddenly Alice stepped off the river floor where it shelves deeply. She vanished. Little Phyllis plunged toward the spot in an attempt at rescue. She vanished.

Struggling wildly, the elder sister came to the surface, tugging at her smaller charge. Then both little girls went under.

The Cronin child ran up the riverbank, screaming for help. Half a dozen men responded and started diving.

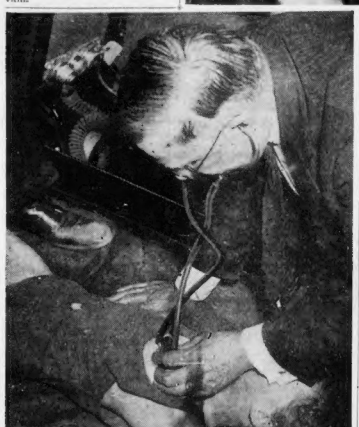
Meanwhile the mother of Natalie Cronin telephoned to her husband, Patrolman Dennis Cronin of the Metropolitan police, and he summoned Newton police and fire departments.

RECOVER BODIES

It took only a few minutes to recover the two small bodies, but even then they were seemingly lifeless.

For more than two hours, with inhalators and with the prone method of artificial respiration, firemen and police tried to bring back life.

Then Dr. Charles L. Thompson of Walnut street, Newton Upper Falls, advised them further efforts were vain.



A heart-broken mother, Mrs. Dennis Horrigan, of Newton Upper Falls, prayed not far away, on the bank of the Charles river, as efforts to no avail were made to save her daughters, Alice and Phyllis, who fell into the river. The doctors and firemen were still hopeful for a spark of life for Alice (above) and Phyllis as these pictures were made.

TWELVE MEN, 2 CRAFT MISSING AT SEA

Twelve men were listed as missing today as coast guardsmen all along the Atlantic seaboard pursued their search for a five-masted schooner and a missing outboard motorboat.

The schooner Edna Hoyt, bound from Venezuela to Boston with a crew of nine aboard, has been unaccounted for since July 16 when she sailed from the South American port.

The outboard motor boat dropped from sight off Westport, Ct., when three men, who had hired it for a fishing trip, failed to return to the dock at nightfall.

Coast guard stations along the Gulf coast and Atlantic seaboard were asked to maintain watch for the Edna Hoyt.

While the boat is not yet due in Boston, the request that she be sought came through the agent of her owners because no word had been received since she sailed two weeks ago. The schooner has no radio.

At Westport, Ct., fear was expressed for the safety of the trio which hired the outboard motor boat and set out for a fishing trip in Long Island sound early yesterday.

At nightfall they had failed to return and the truck in which they drove to the Great Marsh landing remained unclaimed in the parking space.

A check-up showed the truck was registered to Hector Therrien, of Danbury. State police were checking at his address today in the hope they might learn the identity of the trio of missing men.

Cambridge Man "Hit-Run" Victim

Arthur Nelson, 38, of Cherry street, Cambridge was found today semi-conscious in Binney street, near Commercial avenue, Cambridge. Later in Cambridge City Hospital he told police he had been run down by a hit and run motorist.

Officers who had picked up the man, said that near him was a 15-foot length of copper sheathing, an iron bar and a pair of canvas gloves. Investigation showed sheathing had been torn from the gutter of the Viscol plant, nearby.

AUTO CRASHES HURT SIX

Six persons were injured today, three critically, in automobile crashes in Greater Boston and on the Cape, one may be the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

In an unusual accident in Woburn, four persons were thrown out of their beds by the impact of a car which skidded and crashed against the side of the house at 183 Main street.

Three persons in the car were injured and taken to Choate Memorial Hospital.

They are George E. Emerson, 25, of Lexington street; Miss Winifred O'Donnell, 21, of Prospect street, and Mrs. Claire Monroe, 30, of Cambridge road, all of Woburn.

In the house were Roger E. Flaherty, his wife, Elizabeth, and two older daughters, Elizabeth G., 29, and Nora, 33. The side of the home was damaged. A piano in the living room was also moved.

Daniel Falvey, 48, of Hyde Park avenue, Jamaica Plain, was critically injured after he had been struck by an auto as he left a street car near his home. The motorist fled.

At Dennis, on the Cape, a 17-year-old boy from Arizona, spending the summer along the South Shore, and his girl companion were seriously injured in an automobile collision on Route 6.

Miss Anderson told Judge G. J. Knight, who is presiding over the hearing that on each occasion Miss Taylor remained at the Thorpe home she served breakfast to the woman and Dr. Thorpe in bed, in the doctor's bedroom.

CAN'T BE FOUND

The name of Miss Taylor, a striking blonde, who is said to be a former sweetheart of Tommy Manville, the asbestos heir, was injected into the hearing Tuesday when Dr. Thorpe identified pictures of himself embracing her.

She is said to be in New York at present, and efforts of Miss Astor to subpoena her as a witness have failed.

The nurse testified that Mrs. Lillian Lawton Miles, another beautiful blonde, stayed with Dr. Thorpe and slept in his bedroom on two occasions.

She also received her breakfast in bed with the physician, Miss Anderson told Judge Knight.

On two occasions when Miss Taylor and Mrs. Miles stayed at the Thorpe home, only one bed in the physician's bedroom was disturbed, the witness stated.

NAMES TWO OTHERS

Two other women who asserted-ly occupied the doctor's bedroom were a "Betty Graft" and a Mrs. Madge Scoffield. Both were served their breakfast in bed, but on the occasion of Mrs. Scoffield's visit, the nurse said, "both beds were occupied."

Miss Anderson told the court that when Dr. Thorpe relinquished the baby temporarily to Miss Astor she remained as nurse and found the mother to be "loving and affectionate" toward the little girl. The witness testified:

"She spent nearly all day playing with Marilyn."

Description of an asserted altercation between Dr. Thorpe and Miss Taylor, in which the latter assertedly "stabbed him with a carving fork," and had to be restrained until police arrived, was given by Police Officer John Walker.

The officer said:

"I went to Dr. Thorpe's home to answer a disturbance call. When I arrived there I found Dr. Thorpe sitting on Miss Norma Taylor in a bathroom.

"She was intoxicated. He told me she had stabbed him and asked me to take her away."

SHOWED WOUNDS

The policeman stated Dr. Thorpe showed him two wounds on his thigh which he claimed had been made by a carving fork. The officer testified:

"I asked him if he wanted to prefer charges, but he said no, he just wanted her taken away. I asked him who she was and he said just a woman he had met a couple of times and couldn't get rid of."

When the hearing opened, Dr. Thorpe was recalled to the witness stand to be grilled by Woolley.

He admitted that on May 1, the day he moved from Toluca Lake home to permit his ex-wife to occupy it with their daughter, he had received $5000 from the actress.

The attorney asked:

"That $5000 didn't have anything to do with your relinquishing your daughter, did it?"

FINAL PAYMENT

"Absolutely not," was the physician's emphatic answer, and turning to Judge Knight he said:

"That was her final payment on my half-interest in the home. I received $15,000 altogether."

Dr. Thorpe admitted also that he never found his child neglected while under the care of her mother, and that Miss Astor showed considerable interest in the little girl.

Woolley asked:

"It was a motherly interest, wasn't it?"

"No. I say it was a casual interest," Dr. Thorpe replied.

The physician said that while Marilyn was with her mother he felt he could "keep an eye on her."

Dr. Thorpe a year ago obtained a default divorce from his wife and custody of their child.

Call of Wild

Thatcher, Ariz., July 30 (AP)— A wild canary turned her back on freedom today for a mate and family life within a cage.

Mrs. Grant Bingham placed her pet canary's cage in the sun. Soon, she said, she was attracted by a wild canary pecking at the window pane.

Opening the window and leaving the door to her bird's cage ajar, Mrs. Bingham left the room. When she returned, she said, both birds were perched in the cage.

RIFLE SQUADS SPREAD RED TERROR IN SPAIN

ter the night air here in Burgos, where the White government announces the summary execution of their prisoners, like Captain Francisco Gordon of the Carbineros. He was captured leading the Red militia in Espinosa De Los Monteros.

BISHOP KILLED

The Whites also announce that in Siguenza the Reds killed a bishop and pillaged the town, but that the Whites now have retaken Siguenza and are pressing on towards Guadalajara, which is only 33 miles from Madrid.

Similarly, the Whites report that a raiding party of Reds from Barcelona reached as far as Pina de Ebro, only 25 miles from Saragossa. White troops from Saragossa threw the Reds back to Fraga.

On their way through Gaspe the Reds, according to White reports, murdered several priests and burned two churches.

The White military command at Leon announces the capture of ten prisoners, including Jose Silva Val, chairman of the Leftist coalition, who was immediately put to death, while the others were sentenced to life imprisonment.

FOOD GROWS SCARCE

Also the Whites officially announced that in Carmora and Lora Del Rio they shot several Reds for possessing arms.

These events have their counterpart in Madrid, where, despite their contact with the outside world through Valencia, the Reds' political terror appears to be increasing, and the food supply is approaching a state of serious diminution.

The mayor of Madrid has ordered all farmers in the vicinity to hurry with their crop harvests.

One hundred forty British citizens have taken shelter in the British embassy in Madrid and have formed a committee for defense. The diplomatic corps, through its dean, the Chilean ambassador, protested to the Madrid government against the insecurity of the embassies, and, dissatisfied with the replies received, the diplomats have threatened to withdraw to Valencia.

Indicative of conditions in Madrid was the announcement of the mayor today that terror in the capital was the fault of the Fascists. Equally illustrative of the terroristic conditions in that city was Madrid's announcement that two White officers, Colonel Fernando Chapuli and Captain Enrique Robleda, had "committed suicide."

PALACES RAIDED

Friends here of the Duke of Alba, famed No. 1 grandee of Spain, who also bears the English title of Duke of Berwick, report another development similar to the Russian revolution. They have received word that the Duke has suffered confiscation of his famous Palace of Liria in Madrid, which contains one of world's finest collections of Rembrandts, said to include 20 portraits of Alba's ancestors.

The palaces of the Duke of Medina Celi and Duke of Infantado have also been confiscated, but, curiously enough, the property of the English Duke of Wellington, who is also the Spanish Duke of Ciudad Rodrigo, has until now been respected.

Here in Burgos the town is crowded with dukes, marquises, counts and wealthy commoners, who are contributing money and goods to the White Army. Despite the lavishness of the donors, the sight of this hotel lobby piled with gifts for the troops does not awaken confidence in the Whites' service of supplies.

The gifts include 100 pairs of canvas shoes.

All night before the hotel door sit four guards armed with rifles, revolvers, and knives. They are the bodyguard of the Count of Valtellano, leader of the Monarchist Party, and of Senor Goicoechea, representative of former King Alfonso.

WHITE TROOPS ADVANCE

All the great landowners have induced their peasants to join up with the Whites, but their reliability is not entirely without question.

Public lists are displayed of subscribers to the White funds, and the hundreds of names indicate that few citizens are being overlooked.

On the military front the Whites report that on their extreme right flank their troops are on the way to Guadarrama have reached Venta De San Rafael, which brings them still closer to El Escorial, near Madrid.

On the Burgos-somo Sierra line, the White troops have advanced to the outskirts of Buitrago, which they hope to capture today, in order as soon as possible to cut Madrid's water supply at Lozoyuela, and afterwards to attack their next big objective, the high mountain village of La Cabrera.

On the White left flank they have come within 40 miles of Guadalajara, key point on the way to Madrid.

On their rear in the north the Whites announce that their commander in the Basque provinces, Col. Aranda, has taken Trubia, although Bilbao is still in the hands of the government, as is San Sebastian.

In the south, the Whites announce, they have taken the port of Huelva, next to the Portuguese frontier and north of Gibraltar.

Despite these optimistic reports, nothing is heard of any advance by General Francisco Franco in the south, and while a week ago there was talk of taking Madrid "tomorrow," the talk now is of weeks or months.

2 Groups of Americans In Flights from Spain

Madrid, July 30 (AP)—A general exodus of beleaguered Americans from the capital to Valencia got under way today amid conflicting reports of who was holding the town.

The government claimed "complete normalcy" and Loyalist control of the city, and estimated 30 Americans were reported to have arrived there in safety.

Nine United States citizens departed for Valencia on an early train, and at least 75 others, sheltered in the embassy here, were packing to depart tonight.

Steaming toward Valencia, said diplomatic reports here, was the United States cruiser Quincy, prepared to take the Americans on board.

Merle Cochran, first secretary of the United States embassy in Paris, arrived at Casablanca, Morocco, with his wife and nine other Americans from Seville.

The Cochrans were on vacation in Seville, Spain, when the revolution broke out.

The other Americans were Harold E. Benson, Ralph C. Thompson Black, and Reuben Garcia of New York; Lucille Draper of Hiram, O.; Marjorie Draper of New Freedom, Miss.; Windsor Zilyenko of Santa Monica, Calif.; Martin L. Zikowich of Salt Lake City, and Elizio De La Rosa and Manuel Rivera, of Puerto Rico.

Visitor Stabbed At Suffolk Downs

Cecil C. Marberry, who gave his address as Suffolk Downs, faced arraignment in East Boston court today on charges growing out of the stabbing of Albert Wheeler, 41, of Louisville, Ky., during an altercation in the track stables. Wheeler is being treated at Massachusetts General Hospital.

HOSPITAL FETE RAISES FUND FOR BEDS

Featuring many youngsters confined to the institution, the annual garden party at Prendergast Preventorium, 1009 Harvard street, Mattapan, was held today under the auspices of the Boston Tuberculosis Association.

The party, well attended by hundreds of Bostonians who have been actively interested in the work of the preventorium, is sponsored each year for the purpose of raising funds to maintain the free bed unit of the hospital.

SHOWN BUILDINGS

Those attending the party for the first time were shown through the grounds and buildings of the institution which is said to be one of the foremost of its kind in the United States.

The wards containing the free beds have been filled since the origin of the institution in 1927. A long waiting list for admittance is now on file.

AID TUBERCULAR

The success of the free beds depends almost entirely upon the revenue derived from the annual garden party, it was said.

Seize Nazis After Riot in Vienna

Vienna, July 30 (AP)— Police rounded up all known Nazis today following a disorderly demonstration coincident with arrival of the Olympic Torch in Vienna.

Newspapers bitterly assailed the agitators, saying the incident endangered the new Austro-German accord and the administration's program of internal peace.

Man Brought Ashore

CURLEY SETS SHERMAN'S FATE TODAY

chamber; listened attentively and earnestly as Mrs. Sherman, dry-eyed, but with all the passionate devotion of motherhood, pictured her son as a "good boy" who did chores around the kitchen for her, and even helped with the dishes.

DROWNING ACCIDENT

"He didn't do it," she told the governor. "He couldn't have done it . . . It was an accident, his wife's drowning . . . I'm positive it was an accident . . . Mr. Governor, you must believe it was an accident . . . The confession? . . . The boy didn't know what he was doing when he made that confession . . ."

The governor sent for the four state troopers who heard Sherman confess to the deliberate drowning of his wife, who took it down stenographically, and who watched the choir singer sign the document which sealed his doom.

The private heart-to-heart talk the parents had with Governor Curley was a sorrowful scene both for them and for the state's chief executive.

"It is a tough case to pass upon," the chief executive told the press. "I must read the confession thoroughly. I must talk to the troopers. I must know if Sherman told his story voluntarily or under duress."

While further legal moves were being made, Sherman sat stolcally in his cell in the death house at state prison, evidently not to dread of next week when he is doomed to die.

"Resting and reading," his guards say, he continues to maintain astounding calm as the week of August 3 approaches.

In another last-minute move, Attorney Humes, chief defense counsel, sent petitions for clemency signed by 369 persons to Executive Councillor Winfield A. Schuster with a request that they be presented to the Governor.

In a note accompanying the petition Humes pointed out that the signatures representing 90 per cent of the residents of Sutten and nearly three-score of Sherman's fellow workers, indicating the "overwhelming public sympathy in the community" for the Sutton machinist.

MAGILL NAME ABSENT

These petitions were presented to the governor, and added to the file of interested parties to the Sherman plea for clemency.

There were names of all but three of the fifty town officials, names of all of the former town officials.

There were names of 57 of Sherman's former co-workers at the Whitin Machine Works in Whitinsville, and five of these names were names of girl workers.

There was one name conspicuously absent, the name of another feminine co-worker, the name of Esther Magill—the "other woman" in the triangle which brought death to Mrs. Alice Sherman in the dark waters of Lake Singletary.

On their tragic visit to the governor's chambers the parents were accompanied by a son-in-law, Norman Perry of Sutton. He sat with them throughout the interview, but said nothing.

Mrs. Sherman "controlled" herself emotionally, the governor revealed, although the father, he said, "went to pieces" and cried.

Even the governor was visibly affected by the ordeal and said he didn't "want to go through another like it."

With expressed "profound sympathy for the parents" the governor promised to do what he could in view of all the circumstances that were brought to his official attention.

MOTOR DEATHS REACH 118

Death took the wheel for the 118th time this year in Greater Boston when Miss Mary Hunter, 67, of Ocean Avenue, Revere, died in Chelsea Memorial Hospital.

Miss Hunter was injured last Tuesday night when she was struck by an automobile near her home.

According to police the operator of the car was Miss Louise Sterner of Bowdoin street, Winthrop.

Bomb Powder Keg

Conn. Woman Tells Of Spain Flight

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, July 30—Imagine sitting on top of a powder magazine for a night and a day while Army aviators tried to bomb it.

That was the blood-cooling experience of Miss Alvena Cobanks, of New York. Fortunately, the Spanish pilots' aim was not so good. They couldn't connect with the powder magazine so Miss Cobanks, the first refugee to arrive here from the Spanish civil war, lived to tell her amazing adventure today.

Miss Cobanks, a tall, attractive woman who divides her time between New York and Danbury, Conn., while not traveling, arrived today on the Conte Di Savoia. She related:

"I sailed on the Liner Rex on June 26, to meet some friends in Madrid. We planned to spend some time traveling through Spain.

"Instead of proceeding directly to Madrid, I spent some time in Gibraltar and other places and reached Seville by July 14. I was there four days when the revolution broke out.

REVOLUTION CRIES

"It was a warm, pleasant day, that first Saturday of the revolution. I was taking a drive in a carriage. The streets were quiet and there wasn't the slightest indication of what was to come. I was in a park, which was quiet as a cemetery, when I noticed my driver began acting strangely.

"He seemed to be trying to get out of the park. But whenever he approached an entrance he would back the carriage up and drive away. He finally got out and drove rapidly on little-used streets along the waterfront. Presently I began to notice excited groups forming. When we passed them the driver would shout: 'American! American! No comprende!'

"I began hearing shouts of 'revolution!' By the time we reached the hotel we could hear gunfire crackling in several directions. The driver explained he had been trying to avoid military barracks in his drive from the park.

"The firing increased and the boom of cannon could be heard when we were in the hotel. All entrances to the hotel were barred and the heavy iron gates closed. The firing continued all night.

BOMB POWDER PLANT

"That night all lights were put out in the hotel. I had to undress in the dark. Through the shutters of my window I could see occasional movements outside. I could hear the continual firing and occasionally the whistle of bullets entirely too near the hotel.

"The shooting continued through Sunday and on Sunday night there was a new sound. We could hear two planes overhead and presently there was the whistling and exploding of bombs near the hotel.

"We went to the cellar to a tap room, upon the advice of a Frenchman, who had been a World War pilot. There were 35 foreigners besides myself; Americans English, Irish and French.

"We were not made to feel any better when we were told that right behind the hotel there was a powder plant. That's what the government aviators were shooting at. (The city had been in the hands of the rebels from the start of the fighting.)

AMERICANS NEAR DEATH

"Strangely enough, nobody was panic-stricken, though the attack lasted through most of the night. Only one couple seemed overcome by fear. They looked pretty awful, but made no disturbance.

"It was late Monday morning before the pyanes were driven away—without having scored a hit on the munitions plant. We were told that several government planes had come to the attack, but that rebel artillery had shot down all but the two which tried to bomb us.

"We were cooped up in the hotel two days longer, with nothing to eat except some stale bread and cold meats. We got a little beer to drink.

"On Wednesday afternoon the gates were swung open to a bunch of rebel soldiers who came in with machine guns. They took the guns to the roof. We were then permitted to venture out on the streets. My hotel was the Christina.

"At another hotel—the Inglaterre—we learned of the narrow escape of some Americans who had taken refuge there. We learned that one heavy gun had found its mark there. The projectile had torn through a hall in which the Americans were huddled. It tore the head off a Spanish bellboy. No one else was killed or injured that I know of.

TELLS OF FIGHT

"The streets of the city and many of the buildings were badly wrecked. We saw a number of people going around in bandages, but could get little information on how many had been killed or wounded.

"Thursday night we were quartered at the American consulate and the next morning 63 of us, Americans, Irish, English and French, were taken on the British destroyer Shamrock. We arrived in Gibraltar at 8. a. m. Friday.

"Up to then I had been pretty calm. But after I was out of the danger zone I went to pieces completely. I knew I couldn't get in touch with my friends in Madrid—I hope they are all right—so I decided to take the first possible boat to America. I caught the Conte Di Savoia that night.

"It was very depressing to see the Spanish people. They are horribly poor; poorer than the people in parts of China I've visited. Their babies are so tiny and have such skinny legs. They are terribly miserable and unhappy.

"I am convinced the only person to be today is an American or British citizen.

"The experience was quite upsetting. I am going up to my country place at Danbury and pull weeds in the garden for a while to see if I can forget it."

Continental Bank to Pay Dividend

Frederick S. Deitrick, receiver of the Boston-Continental National Bank, announced today that a third dividend of 5 per cent, payable to all creditors who have proved their claims has been authorized by Comptroller of the Currency at Washington.

Due to the length of time necessary to complete the preparation of dividend checks, schedules and receipts, the distribution of the dividend checks will probably be made in October, and due notice of the exact date will be announced prior to that time through the press, he said.

PUBLIC BUYERS OF AMOSKEAG BONDS AIDED

Persons who purchased bonds of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company in the public market for cash have reason to rejoice today as it appeared they would be paid back in full before the operators of the textile mill collect a cent.

This assurance of preference was handed down as part of a 10,000 word opinion by Referee in Bankruptcy Arthur Black, in a special master's report filed with Judge George C. Sweeney in U. S. District Court. Judge Sweeney will either approve or reject such a recommendation in about ten days, it is believed.

The decision by Referee Black came after the question had been brought up by one of the stockholders, Mrs. Eliza S. Leland, of Brookline. She holds $20,000 in Amoskeag securities.

Treasurer Frederick Dumaine and other trustees of the holding company maintained, however, that all bondholders should be treated in similar fashion when it came to pay-offs.

The Amoskeag trustees hold bonds valued at $5,600,000, while the other bondholders, who have thus far "benefited" by Referee Black's decision, have bonds totaling $7,779,000. Referee Black declared:

"The Amoskeag operators were pulling out their money as fast as they could and they didn't want to acknowledge it. The trustees of the Old Trust had definitely decided to put their winnings aside and play safe. From that day to this, they have never put back a cent into the operation of the mill property."

SWAMP VICTIM YOUNG WOMAN

Peabody, July 30—Police files throughout New England were being checked today in an effort to solve the mystery of the victim of South Peabody's swamp slaying.

Checkers were working with a general description of the victim, obtained through reconstruction of the skeleton from the evidence of the leg bones found in the swamp and now in possession of police.

The description lists the victim as a young woman five feet tall and weighing 105 pounds. Her legs had a slight tendency to bow, she wore a size five shoe and toed in slightly as she walked, according to the reconstructed description.

Meanwhile search of the swamp area continued in an effort to uncover the remainder of the skeleton. It is now believed that the remains were not in the swamp more than a few months.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and wastes out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

'Uncle, Give Us Bread!'

FILTH REPELS NEWCOMERS

Night of Agony Revealed

Arne Strom is a Danish poultry expert who had lived in Canada and the United States. He was engaged by the Soviet government to help improve its state farms.

Accompanied by his wife and child, Mr. Strom went to Soviet Russia imbued with a deep sympathy for the Communist experiment.

He spent a year off the beaten track, on a state collective farm and traveling widely throughout the country.

Everywhere he went in Russia he heard the cry from a starving and miserable people "Uncle Give Us Bread!" He returned to Denmark utterly disillusioned.

With the pitiable cry of the tortured millions "Uncle Give Us Bread!" as the title, Mr. Strom has published the record of his experiences.

The book was translated from Danish and issued in England in the spring of 1936.

ARTICLE FOUR

By ARNE STROM

A sentry with fixed bayonet guarded its entrance —that made us feel happy and safe. Our carriage drew up in front of the main building, which was quite new and still unpainted. It was hideous and already had an air of decay. The coachman seized some of our belongings and, carrying the rest, we followed him up the steps.

The walls had been plastered with mud which had come off in big patches. The steps were crowded with women who sat about barefooted, with their heads swathed in thick woolen shawls. Innumerable children with bare stomachs and long stared at us, with their small, dirty fingers in their mouths.

The steps were covered with a thick layer of trampled earth; only at the corners did a glimpse of the wood show that the steps were not after all dug out of the ground itself. Having reached the first floor the coachman kicked open a door, threw our luggage on the floor, turned to us and said with a big guffaw: "Das ist gut" ("That's all right").

Two women were busy plastering the walls. We looked about us. It struck us as so refreshingly impertinent to offer an abode like that to civilized beings that we burst out laughing.

Beds of Doors

In an adjoining room three beds made from doors whose handles had been unscrewed had been put on trestles. The mattresses were bed-covers filled with straw. These covers were dirty and showed signs of innumerable murders of bedbugs. One could see right through the walls.

I looked surreptitiously at my wife, who with a resigned smile was looking around the two miserable garrets. Tears were not far off, I could see.

"I shan't be long," I said as I ran downstairs, "and don't you worry; I shall get rooms at the hotel."

I now discovered the cause of the vile stench which lay over the little town—it was a wide open sewer which for practical and just reasons was dug down the length of the main street, so that all should have the same distance to go with their garbage.

With the energy of despair a flock of hunchbacked, long-legged, long-bristled pigs were searching for something to eat, but their efforts only resulted in the stench becoming worse than ever.

The hotel was quite a new building, and was not yet finished, but already it looked very ramshackle. It was ideally situated between the sewer and the station building. The landlord declared that all the rooms were engaged, but invited me to take a look around, and I must admit that never have I seen a hotel so fully engaged.

Interpreter

I peeped into several rooms where sleeping accommodations has been rigged up in bunks several stories high and beds spread all over the floor.

I know of no word strong enough to describe the dirt everywhere. Rooms and passages stank, so that the air outside the hotel was like balm. I nervously turned the pages of my phrase-book till I managed to put together the question as to whether there was another hotel in the town.

I immediately understoon him to say that there were no other hotels in Povorino.

On my return I found nine big men in one of our rooms eagerly gesticulating while they probably discussed what on earth they were to do with us.

I explained to my wife how matters were and said we should not be able to get better housing till next day. If we did not then succeed we would take the train back to Moscow. We threw a glance at the bed, the beetles, the bloodstains on the mattresses. We were undoubtedly in for a pleasant night!

A greasy, grinning, freckled, red-haired little woman whose head was wrapped in a heavy grey snawl addressed us in a language in which we recognized a few works as like German.

Her head on one side she said:

"Ich bin die Maruscka (I am Maruscka), and I'm to be your interpreter."

She was full of her importance, and trying to please at the same time.

"Please go down to the manager and tell him we are going back to Moscow by the next train."

Alas! Poor ignorant fool that I was, I had no conception of the enormous difficulties in getting railway tickets in Russia—but more of that later.

Suddenly Marushka was standing in our room again. It seemed all unknown civility in this part of the world to knock at the door. The manager had gone on a fishing expedition and the under-manager had not yet returned from town; it was hardly worth while waiting for him as he had probably drunk too much vodka and would not be in a state fit for conversation till the next day.

Heavens, what a night . . .

The electric light burnt till 10 o'clock and then suddenly went out. As if they had only been lying in wait for this, the bugs immediately attacked us.

The child, who had slept a little, was wide awake at once and wanted to know why he itched all over. My wife and he walked up and down the room while I hunted through the house for an oil-lamp.

We lighted it and a wild hunt after the horribly swift bugs began. Soon the child was sleeping soundly, but neither my wife nor I slept one wink till the sun was shining through the curtainless windows.

From our window I had a view of the whole poultry farm, which looked enormous. I noted with surprise that all the windows were closed on this lovely morning.

Having made out a list of things which were absolutely indispensable I promised my wife to get them, even if I had to apply to Stalin himself. I had now discovered that by threats and cheek one could get anything—as long as the thing was there at all.

The manager was just like a Chinaman, only he was white. At first he seemed quite open and honest, but I soon found out that that was only one of his many interesting masks. He very much regretted that he had been away from home on our arrival, but the telegram had come only an hour before we did.

I asked him to find me better lodgings immediately. If that were impossible we were returning to Moscow by the midday train. He would have to get us two rooms which were satisfactory from a health point of view, free from bugs, and with a private closet.

He seemed very worried at these demands.

He then asked me in which chicken-house I wished to work. I told him I had not come to this poultry farm nor to Russia at all in general to work in any particular chicken-house, but to help him and so the Soviet Union to solve such problems, both technical and administrative, as might arise.

HAIL Hollywood EPIC

SHOW 'ANTHONY ADVERSE' FILM

Hollywood, July 30 (US)—On the crest of a tidal wave of splendor, "Anthony Adverse" swept to a triumphant opening at the Carthay Circle theater last night.

It was an epic world premiere for an epic production.

The pattern of the premiere was more glittering, more multicolored, more thunderous than any in Hollywood history.

Warner Brothers' star-studded cinema translation of Hervey Allen's magnificent best-seller received a welcome unprecedented in the capital city of the motion picture realm.

It was Hollywood's night of nights.

Warner Brothers, sensing the terrific interest in the premiere, had built an immense grandstand outside the theater. It was filled, packed solidly with eager humanity, long before dusk.

Magic Names

The turnout of Fredric March, the Anthony of the film play, and his party, was the signal for a glorious outburst. Breathlessly lovely Anita Louise . . . Olivia de Havilland, of the cameo-like beauty . . . dashing Claude Rains . . . exotic Steffi Duna . . . striking Gale Sondergaard . . . handsome Donald Woods . . . jovial Edmund Gwenn . . . ascetic-looking Henry O'Neil . . .

These, and Jack Warner, who gave the production a titanic underwriting . . . Mervyn Le Roy, boyish-looking and excited as a school lad, who directed "Anthony Adverse," and Sheridan Gibney, who prepared the novel for the screen . . . each received a separate ovation which blended with the incessant, joyous booming of vocal tribute.

Noted Guests

The guests of Mr. and Mrs. Warner were Marion Davies, Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow, Jr., Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown, Regina Carewe, Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Netcher, Mr. and Mrs. Val Raoch, Maureen O'Sullivan and John Farrow, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Reachi, Virginia Bruce, Cesar Romero, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Grey and others.

"Anthony Adverse" received the imprimatur of the people who create motion pictures. Executives of rival studios stood and clapped and shouted and sang untinited praises of the story of love and adventure, intrigue and peril that unfolded before them in such magnitude, in such bold etching that one felt the centuries had been rolled back by some inexplicable alchemy.

Retired Policeman Wins Ballad Prize

Schasberger's music for the lyrics of Braley's "Boondoggle Ballad" was selected by a jury of awards made up of Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, Robert Bruce and John W. Green, composer and orchestra leader for Jack Benny.

The jury announced it would make public the names of the national winners in the competition within the next few days.

Nudists Plan War On Peepers

Long Valley, N. J., July 30 (INS)—The original Peeping Tom who sought to get an eyeful of Lady Godiva on her white horse was struck blind, but the next peeper who focuses his orbs on the Long Valley nudist colony will be struck with a policeman's nightstick, if Stephen Rock has his way.

Rock is director of the nudist colony at Morris County, N. J., that has been harrassed by "peeping parties" conducted by Fleaner-Constable William Searles. Searles invited parties to come and spy on the nudists and thus stare them out of the county.

Search party peep show last week was a doubtful success because the nudists appeared for their frolic clad in shorts with the addition of halters for the women. Searles claimed a moral victory, but the crowd of invited peepers went away grumbling their disappointment.

But Rock is equally irked and today had appealed to Governor Hoffman for a police guard to assure the privacy of his nudist camp, particularly from 2 p. m. to 5. p. m. on Sundays.

3 Safe After Night Adrift

Westport, Conn., July 30 (AP)—Three Danbury fishermen landed here today after spending the night adrift on Long Island Sound, surprised to find themselves the object of a search. The men were John F. Coynad, Hector L. Therrien and Theodore Scasco.

SALEM TELLER BROUGHT BACK

Claude H. Knowlton, Salem bank teller who led G-Men a merry chase for nearly seven weeks before being captured in Peru, was returned to Boston today from Nevada for arraignment as an alleged embezzler of $25,750 of the bank's funds.

The bank teller, whose alleged theft was from the Merchants National Bank of Salem, was brought back to Boston by Chief Deputy Marshal L. S. Brawner of Carson City, Nevada.

Taken immediately to the office of Marshal John J. Murphy in the Federal Building, Knowlton was held incommunicado and it was even ordered by Murphy that no federal officials talk with the prisoner until his counsel had arrived.

It was understood that Knowlton's wife had made provisions for bail as soon as he was arraigned in Federal Court.

Knowlton, 41, had been with the Salem bank for 22 years. He vanished last May 29, but was captured finally by forwarding $500 through a friend to his wife, Mrs. Olive Knowlton of Clough street, Lynn.

Federal agents reported that they had recovered $22,217.80 of the $25,750 alleged to have been stolen.

Excitement, Suspense On Boston Screen

By MARION FRENCH

There is enough frenzied excitement and suspense in "Moonlight Murder" and "Crash Donovan," the new pictures at the RKO-Boston Theater, to take anyone's mind off any heat wave, we're sure.

Chester Morris and Madge Evans (very blonde and very beautiful these days) are featured in "Moonlight Murder" which finds Leo Carrillo, cast as a famous tenor, very much a corpse early in the picture. In fact, it is with Leo's demise that Mr. Morris and Miss Evans are chiefly concerned, he being a young detective who solves the murder mystery with the help of the glamorous Madge.

Carrillo meets his tragic end in the famous Hollywood Bowl before an audience of 20,000. Heart trouble is suspected to be the cause of his death but it takes Mr. Morris' ingenuity to solve the crime. He and Miss Evans have many a misunderstanding while he is about his business, which adds interest and much humor to the film.

* * *

A rare poison has been used in a mysterious fashion (the only clue to this slaying and a subsequent one involving a suspect are tiny broken electric light bulbs) and when the culprit is finally tracked down his close relationship to the people interested in solving the crime makes for complications.

All ends well, however, and Mr. Morris and Miss Evans are reconciled to the fact that they were very fond of the murderer at one time, and decide that life is still sweet since they have each other, at least.

Grant Mitchell, Duncan Renaldo, Robert McWade, H. B. Warner, Benita Hume, Katharine Alexander and Frank McHugh are the other fine performers besides Leo Carrillo, Chester Morris and Madge Evans, who are members of the cast of "Moonlight Murder."

* * *

"Crash Donovan" has smiling Jack Holt as a devil-may-care motorcycle patrolman belonging to the California highway patrol. He h.. many thrilling experiences and narrow escapes while pursuing both a band of criminals and a pretty girl with whom he has less luck than in his business.

John King is the handsome patrolman who wins the disputed lady, played by Nan Gray, and sends Holt back to his carnival exhibitions from whence he came. Eddie Acuff, Hugh Buckler, Douglas Fowley, Ward Bond and James Donlan are supporting players in this exciting picture.

Esplanade Program

Wedding March from "Op. 47" ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Op. 98 ..... Brahms
(First two movements)
1 Allegro non troppo
2 Andante moderato
Overture to "Mignon" ..... Thomas
INTERVAL
Rhapsody "Espana" ..... Chabrier
Romance from the Second Violin Concerto ..... Wieniawski
Violin solo: Gaston Elcus
Waltz, "The Waltz Dream" ..... Waldteufel
Czardas, "Ghost of the Warrior" ..... Grossman

Gayety's Films

The Gayety Theater will have "Whispering Smith Speaks," with George O'Brien and Irene Ware, and "Don't Get Personal," featuring James Dunn and Sally Eilers, on its screen for the next three days. In addition to these pictures, there are five vaudeville acts.

Schenck Shuns Chance To Star Eddie Cantor

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, July 30 (US)—Eddie Cantor may have thought, when he walked out of the Samuel Goldwyn Company, that he would walk right into 20th Century-Fox and take up his movie job where he left off. Eddie has another think coming.

Louella O. Parsons

Joseph M. Schenck in no uncertain terms said that 20th Century was having no dealings in any form or shape with Mr. Cantor.

"I have been in business a good many years," said Mr. Schenck. "I have never yet stolen a star from another company and I certainly wouldn't encourage Mr. Cantor now to leave United Artists with the promise of a contract."

While this writer cannot say that Cantor has no justification for his grievances, we do feel that he took a bad time to take his troubles to his lawyers. Mr. Goldwyn has been so seriously ill that complete rest and quiet were ordered by his worried physicians and Mr. Cantor's attitude will certainly not help his former boss' recovery.

You wouldn't offer Luise Rainer's formula for success to the average movie newcomer because it wouldn't work. But it has worked with the tempestuous Luise, whose amusing little economies and unexpected, humorous outbursts haven't affected her rise to fame. Her performances in "The Great Ziegfeld" and in "Good Earth" will put her neck and neck with Norma Shearer, Marion Davies, Katharine Hepburn and other topnotchers.

MGM, realizing this, is preparing an original story, "Ladies Are Useful," by Virginia Faulkner, to be rushed into production. When Luise returns from her A.W.O.L. holiday in New York she will find Bernie Hyman with this story ready for her.

Sam Briskin took a look at "Walking on Air" and promptly started negotiations with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to buy Director Joseph Santley's contract. So Santley is now an RKO'er with his first assignment "Million Dollar Profile" giving Ann Sothern her first starring role. Ann and Gene Raymond were the head players in "Walking on Air" which you may remember was originally called "Count Pete." We will hear it previewed on "Hollywood Hotel" August 14 with Ann and Gene as the headliners.

Director Richard Wallace, who lost almost a year after his tragic plane smashup, has just had a most interesting offer from Alexander Korda. Dick may scamper across the seas to direct "Under The Red Robe" for Korda.

Snapshots of Hollywood: JACK DUNN waiting in vain for KETTI GALLIAN to show up for a luncheon date; can it be that Ketti is growing cold. Spaghetti and meat balls a la PONSELLE, cooked with ROSA'S own fair hands, were the delicious viands offered some 20 guests; JUDGE MARCHETTI, devoted to ROSA, helping her serve her guests out in the open; DR. and MRS. A. H. GIANNINI among the many Italian guests—they eat their spaghetti minus garlic and tomato sauce; GEORGIE JESSEL, not Italian, proved he could understand a few words, and so did NORMA TALMADGE and MRS. EDDIE ROBINSON; JAMES MELTON, whose spaghetti is as famous as PONSELLE'S, cooking a batch for a party on the completion of his picture; SALLY EILERS and HARRY JOE BROWN entertaining a select group of 15 in honor of MARION DAVIES, with dinner served at an early hour because Marion and the host are working; PAULINE GALLAGHER, representing the BEBE DANIELS-PAULINE GALLAGHER factory, showing their fall line to the visiting buyers; CHARLES LEDERER, talented son of REINE DAVIES, now at Paramount working on a GEORGE RAFT yarn; the tall, handsome stranger with whom ANITA LOUISE has been dining is ROBERT ARBOR, a New York visitor; ANNA STEN hostess at a dinner party, dressed in her native Russian costume; JOHN MONK SAUNDERS on the Normandie, bound for Hollywood and FAY WRAY; he will remain here until after the arrival of the expected heir; JACK WARNER refusing to answer the telephone because there just aren't any more "Anthony Adverse" tickets left; HUNT STROMBERG arriving home after a three months' holiday abroad; RICARDO CORTEZ off for a New York visit.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

CHAPTER 22

About August 16th the thermometer went up to 12 degrees below zero, centigrade. Doniphan, Briant, Service, Wilcox and Baxter thought they might go to Sloughi Bay. They could make the trip in a day.

They wanted to see if the coast had been visited by a large number of seals such as they had seen at the time of the shipwreck. They also would put up a new flag, since the only one they had hoisted must be in rags after the winter storms.

And Briant suggested that they nail a board to the mast, indicating the situation of French Den, in case sailors saw the flag and landed on the beach.

Gordon gave them permission but warned them to be back before night. The five started early and the six miles to Sloughi Bay were covered quickly.

There was no need to go around the frozen quagmire, and before nine o'clock in the morning the boys were on the beach.

"Well! looks at those birds!" cried Wilcox, pointing at the reefs on which stood thousands of fowl looking like big ducks, with elongated beaks, and piercing, disagreeable cries.

"They're only penguins," said Baxter, "and not worth a gunshot."

These odd birds stood up nearly straight and made no move to get away. One could have killed them with a stick . . . But penguins could not be used for anything.

The fat of seals could be used for the lighting of French Den, but when the boys got close to them, they quickly disappeared under the water. It would be necessary later to organize a special expedition to capture a few of them.

After a light lunch the boys put up a new flag and nailed the plank which gave the situation of French Den as "six miles away, going up the course of the little river." About one o'clock they started home along the left bank of the river.

By four o'clock, when it was beginning to get dark, the five arrived at French Den. Gordon was told what had taken place, and it was decided that they would hunt seals as soon as the weather permitted.

During the last week of August and the first week of September heavy rains brought a quick rising of the temperature. The snow disappeared quickly and the ice in the lake began to break, making deafening noises.

Thanks to their precautions, the boys had not suffered greatly during the winter. They had all kept in good health, and the studies had been continued regularly.

Gordon had not had to use his authority against anyone except Dole, who frequently refused to do his work. Gordon had scolded him without avail. Finally, he was sentenced to a whipping.

Dole Whipped

Young English boys do not feel the same dislike that the French boys do for this kind of punishment. Yet, Briant would have protested against the punishment if he had not been obliged to respect the decisions of Gordon. Moreover, where a French school boy would be ashamed, an English boy would see only the danger of showing himself afraid of corporal punishment.

Dole received the whipping from Wilcox, who was appointed to the job, and it was such an example for the others that there was no necessity to repeat the punishment.

On the 10th of September, 1860, when the last ice jam broke in the river, it was six months since the Sloughi had been lost on the reefs of Chairman Island.

* * *

With the fine season coming on the young colonists would be able to carry out some of the plans made during the long winter hours.

This island certainly was not in an archipelago if Francois Baudoin's map was right. Nevertheless, land might be close by. The shipwrecked man had not been able to see far because he had neither telescope nor binoculars. The young boys might discover what the French castaway had not been able to see.

According to the map, Chairman Island was about 12 miles wide in the center, to the east of French Den. The shore sloped there and it would be necessary to plan the expedition in that direction.

But first it was desirable to explore the territory between Auckland Hill, Family Lake and Traps-Woods. To determine its resources an expedition was decided upon for early November.

Chairman Island did not yet feel the influence of spring. September and half of October were marked by very bad weather. Severe cold was felt at times and during the Equinox there were storms as violent as that which had driven the "Sloughi" across the Pacific.

The southern storms, blowing across the open moors, brought the icy temperatures of the Antarctic Sea. It was hard work when the entrance of French Den had to be closed. Twenty times the storms blew open the door to the store-room and penetrated through the passage into the hall. The boys suffered more than they had when it was 30 degrees below zero centigrade. They had to fight wind, rain and hail.

Food Vanishes

To crown their trouble, game disappeared, the creatures taking refuge in parts of the island less exposed to the equinoctial storms. The fish, probably frightened by the agitation of the waters which roared along the shores of the lake, also disappeared.

Meanwhile, Baxter tried to manufacture a means of transportation for heavy loads. He used two wheels of equal size from the horizontal capstan of the yacht. This work required great effort.

The wheels had teeth, and after breaking them off Baxter had to fill the holes left by inserting pieces of wood and covering them with a metal band. Then the wheels were joined by an iron bar and a solid box of planks was built on that axle-tree.

It was a very crude vehicle, but it would render great service. Lacking a horse or mule the most vigorous ones of the colony would be harnessed to this new kind of carriage.

If only they could get hold of some quadruped which they could tame for this use, how much fatigue they would save themselves! Why was it that the animal life of Chairman Island seemed richer in fowl than in four-footed animals? And to judge by Service's ostrich, could any one possibly hope that such birds could be domesticated?

The ostrich had lost nothing of its wild character! No one could approach him without the risk of being knocked down by his beak or his feet. He tried to break his ropes, and if it had been possible he would have soon disappeared in Traps-Woods.

Service was not discouraged, but although he tried hard to tame the feathered fury, no treatment, good or bad, had any effect.

Politicians May Take Up Yodeling

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Politics is getting pretty good when you hear six governors talk for the price of one admission. We heard an executive sextette over all the networks.

The Republicans are coming back with a double quartette of Senators in songs and snappy sayings. An ordinary mayor or alderman can't get on anything better than a children's hour.

Major Bowes is turning down city managers and councilmen, and Rudy Vallee refused an audition to a state assemblyman who couldn't imitate birds, bees and animals.

Advance Fall Suit Tagged by Congress

WITH UNERRING aim in the direction of the exciting, the new and the chic, the Fashion Congress awarded the black-and-silver tag to a star in the fall suit fashion firmament. Undoubtedly!

It is the princess-reefer, modeled by Miss Evelyn Hassman, Brookline post-debutante. Herringbone tweed of fine, soft surface texture and a lovely grey-pebble shade. And lines that make you catch your breath!

Chiefly, its features are these: Tapered waist, with reefer buttons set aslant, and high, close together pockets that emphasize the uniform-trimness of the whole suit; an astonishing sweep of skirt; and high rather than wide fullness on the sleeve-tops. A peak-crown felt with rolling brim and cocky feather finish the costume.

Coat, skirt and a coral-flame tailored blouse of mesh knit are included in the ensemble for somewhere around $35; for shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

TAKE your own sweet time in reducing and save your face. Too great a loss of weight in a short time leaves the skin as loose and baggy as an oversized kid glove.

The penalty of a starvation diet is a "reduced look" and a drawn expression, harder to lose than the pounds. Wrinkles which follow in the wake of reducing are caused by starvation and other physiological strains more than by the removal of subcutaneous fat tissue.

You may never look the same after a rigorous diet. Fat is lost quickly from the face and throat, but regained weight almost invariably goes to waist and hips. Weight lost rapidly returns at the same rate, but the disposition is slow to recuperate, and the skin may never recover.

The skin is a feeble covering which expands and contracts to adapt itself to weight change. To allow for contraction, reducing must be slow. When the efficiency of the skin has been impaired by extreme overweight or fluctuating weight, the reducing pace must be even slower.

Once you make up your mind to reduce, you want to get it over with, but if you value your looks you will gauge your reducing rate by your physical limitations. The maximum reducing speed occurs during the first month of your program and is one to two pounds per week—without a wrinkle. If you have a tendency to lose weight in the face and throat, one pound a week should be your maximum.

Skin contraction is a natural process, and it cannot be hastened. The more weight you lose, the greater the difference between your new weight and the skin which covered your old weight. As you progress with your reducing, the speed is decreased.

Very few women can afford to reduce rapidly. Although wrinkles may not be immediately apparent, you've got them coming to you. Gradual weight loss is the best wrinkle preventive there is, and exercise is the ideal skin astringent. Muscle tone stimulates skin tone. Do some chin and jaw exercises to protect your face and throat while reducing.

If you have not already received the "Let's Chin Awhile" and "Daily Half Dozen" leaflets, send a large, self-addressed and stamped envelope to Ida Jean Kain in care of this paper.

SEATING ARRANGEMENTS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We are to have a first annual banquet of a ladies' society, and as I am an officer, I would like to know if the husbands of the officers should sit at the table with the invited guests . . . all women?

As it is a woman's society, and the guests will be women, do you think it would be better to have the husbands at a near-by table, and not with us? T.

Since you are inviting the husbands to the banquet, it would be more gracious to let them "join the ladies" . . . not ostracize them to a stag-table. In other words, hospitably arrange your table-seating as you would for any other kind of dinner-party . . . alternately women and men. And remember that at any dinner party a husband and wife are not seated next to each other.

GUEST'S ATTIRE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have been invited to a wedding and reception and I am in doubt as to what type dress I should wear. The bride will wear a satin gown, and the men white flannels and dark coats. The wedding will be at 4:30 at the church. Should I wear a long dress or a dressy silk suit? H.

A day-dress of street length is the correct thing for you to wear at the 4:30 church wedding. So the dressy silk suit will be in excellent taste.

Accessory Set

"SERVICE" stripes of a serviceable sort are these of a smartly crocheted beret and bag set.

It's the easiest crochet imaginable, just single crochet and chain stitches, those eye-catching stripes done in rows so that the second thread need not be carried through.

The bag is easy to grasp because of its padded roll top. Use two colors of yarn or guimpe, and trim the beret with a ribbon band. Pattern 1272 contains directions for making the set shown; illustrations of it and of all stitches used; material requirements.

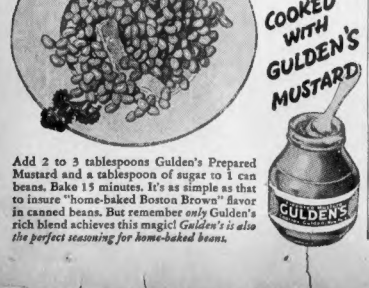
BAKED BEANS

* Recipe for making canned beans taste like "home-baked"



Add 2 to 3 tablespoons Gulden's Prepared Mustard and a tablespoon of sugar to 1 can beans. Bake 15 minutes. It's as simple as that to insure "home-baked Boston Brown" flavor in canned beans. But remember only Gulden's rich blend achieves this magic! Gulden's is also the perfect seasoning for home-baked beans.

Need of Versatility in Technique

It is a great mistake to get into the habit of playing hands automatically, according to type.

For one thing, this sort of technique is an absolute "give-away" to the defenders, as they will be quick to recognize their own special problems the moment the hand is "typed" for them.

In other words, stock plays have induced stock defenses, and when a declarer can see that such a stock defense would result in his defeat, it is only the part of wisdom to avoid rather than induce it.

South, dealer.

North-South vulnerable.

	♠ K 4 3 ♡ K J 8 ◇ 10 7 6 2 ♣ A 7 4

	♠ A Q J 10 2 ♡ 9 ◇ Q 8 4 ♣ K Q J 5

The bidding:

1 ♠	2 ♡	2 N T	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West selected the 10 of clubs as the safest opening lead and, before playing from either hand, declarer carefully considered his problem. Obviously there was acute danger of losing three diamond tricks and one heart, and he therefore concentrated on how to avoid one of these losers.

The customary way of playing such a heart combination is to lead the singleton at the earliest opportunity up to the King, hoping either that the Ace will not go up or that, if it does, the defender will fail to make the killing switch.

But in this case the declarer was well aware that his opponents were excellent players and he felt absolutely sure that if he were to adopt the scheme West would hop up with the Ace and shift to the palpable weakness of the hand—the diamond suit. East would be sure to signal low on the club lead. So he formed an entirely different plan of campaign and proceeded to its execution.

He won the first club trick with dummy's Ace and deliberately denuded dummy of its only other entry—the spade King—by leading it, continuing with two more rounds. Then, after having created the impression in West's mind that he, the declarer, must have at least two hearts, since with a singleton he would not have robbed the dummy of its entries, he led the heart.

ACE TAKES TRICK

That West was completely "taken in" by this clever maneuver, and ducked, reflected no discredit on him. Declarer's play testified almost conclusively to a holding of two or more hearts, and West was afraid that by taking the Ace on the first trick he would establish a finessing position that would give declarer two tricks later.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Young Man Who Marries Finds World's Only Real Security

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The ability to turn a pumpkin into a golden coach and mice into horses to draw it hardly compares with the marvels performed by wives in this depression.

Cinderella's godmother transformed a ragged dress into a beautiful ballroom gown, you remember. That, of course, was quite a feat, although she DID have something to start with.

But I still insist it hardly compares with the ability of mothers in Boston and other cities of the country to clothe sons and daughters on NOTHING, not even rags.

The young man who hesitates to marry, doubts the wisdom of finding himself a wife, has only to see what wives have done throughout this economic crisis. If he sees, he will hesitate and doubt no longer.

My advice to young men is always FIND YOURSELF A GOOD GIRL, COURT HER AND MARRY HER. That is the first step toward the only real security possible in the world today. It is also a movement toward eventual prosperity and success.

Bachelors sometimes reach the top. Married men do it more often. The latter is my bet.

Henry of Waltham writes today's first letter, which is as follows:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a girl at a school dance and I like her more than I thought it possible to like any girl.

We have met occasionally since then and have talked. Now it happens that I want to go out with her and do not know how to ask her. She has told me many times that she likes me, and has also said that she goes out alone.

It's not often that I have had to ask advice about dating a girl—asking her company, I mean—but she's the only one I care to go with.

HENRY

MY DEAR BOY:

Just invite this young girl and go, as she has given you every encouragement by telling you she sometimes goes out alone.

Many young men seem to have the idea that they must "ask for her company," which, not at all necessary, frequently involves boys in serious affairs when all they want is a pleasant, casual friendship.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We've been married 15 years and have no children. About nine months ago, I had the misfortune to discover my husband in an affair with a co-worker. This, I learned, had been going on for two years without arousing my suspicions.

He has been going out several nights a week, plus afternoons. And now, he and she don't seem at all concerned about being seen together in public.

Knowing the young woman's reputation and realizing my husband's faithfulness up to now, I discussed the matter frankly with him a few days ago. And, after a dreadful scene, he gave me to understand he would discontinue the affair. But only today I saw them together again.

I still love my husband and would readily forgive him if he gives me the opportunity. That is why I suggested that we go to some distant place during his vacation and try to forget the past.

This, strangely, did not appeal to him. He insists on my going one place, he another.

What, Miss Fairfax, can I do? Would giving him a dose of his own medicine and accepting the invitations of other men help? Or should I try to be martyr and endeavor to appear unconcerned about something that is breaking my heart?

DISCOURAGED.

DEAR FRIEND:

If you've got to compete with another woman for your husband's affections, you will have to resolve to be once more the charming girl he loved enough to marry.

Flying into rages, displays of jealousy and wholesale accusations certainly will not combine to make you such a woman. Don't make the mistake so many wives make. And, above all, don't let your temper complete the job of handing your husband over to the "other woman."

If I were you, I'd again ask my husband to join me on a vacation. I'd discuss my plans, I'd make them attractive. I'd be so enthusiastic no man, not even my husband, could refuse.

However, if he were such an unusual individual that he did refuse, I'd make up my mind to make the best of it. I'd go away alone, avoid everything that might be associated with scandal, and endeavor to regain a healthy mental attitude.

When you return, you very likely will find a changed man. Two or three weeks of eating in restaurants, making his own bed, looking for his lost shirts, and doing the thousand and one jobs you've always done for him ought to make him realize that after all you ARE worth keeping.

Men, especially those in their late thirties and early forties, frequently get these "other woman" complexes. Fortunately they do not develop into anything serious as a rule. And, in later years, the husband will go down on his knees and thank his wife for being patient with him at this time.

Haste, my dear woman, never pays. Least of all when a foolish husband is concerned.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Refreshing Summer Drinks

DO YOU ever drink your meals in summer? Of course, that's a bit exaggerated, but it's amazing what nourishment and delight can be mixed in a simple beverage which when served with a sandwich or hot bread makes a satisfying hot weather meal.

Buttermilk is refreshing and healthful and combines beautifully with grape juice for a smooth, tangy drink full of food value. Or for a zesty drink try serving a grape gingeree—a mixture of grape-juice and ginger ale.

BUTTERMILK GRAPE PUNCH

½ cup grape juice
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 quart buttermilk
¼ cup powdered sugar

Combine the grape juice, lemon juice and buttermilk. Add the sugar and stir until dissolved. Chill and pour into tall glasses. Serves 4.

STRAWBERRY MALTED MILK

1 quart milk
½ cup chocolate flavored malted milk
½ pint strawberry ice cream
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chipped ice

Place the milk, malted milk, strawberry ice cream, salt and chipped ice in a shaker. Shake vigorously until thoroughly blended. Pour into tall glasses and serve. Serves 4.

GRAPE GINGEREE

1 pint grape juice
2 tbsps. granulated sugar
½ cup lemon juice
1 quart dry ginger ale

Combine the grape juice and sugar, and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Add the lemon juice and chill. Just before serving, add the ginger ale. Serves six.

OLD-FASHIONED LEMONADE

4 lemons
2 cups sugar
½ cup water

Cut lemon in thin slices, place in a bowl, and cover with sugar. Mash thoroughly until all juice is extracted. Add water. Let stand one hour. Allow one or two tablespoons of the strained lemon juice to each serving. Pour into glass filled with shaved ice and fill with water. Garnish with maraschino cherry and slice of lemon.

Make-Up in Harmony With Eyes

POSED BY KAY FRANCIS.

Cosmetics Keyed to Color Of Eyes Lend Glamour And Enchantment

By DONNA GRACE

WE HAVE long stressed the fact that every woman's best feature is her eyes. It is the eyes that attract us, and even though the face may be plain, expressive nice eyes will make it seem beautiful.

When we know how important the eyes really are to our looks, is it not just good common sense to emphasize their loveliness in very way?

We believe women and girls are very careful to select their gowns and hats to harmonize with the color of their eyes. For instance, the brown-eyed, dark-skinned girl will not wear insipid, pastel greens when she knows that violet and smart reds, brown and vivid coloring will enhance the charm and natural lure of her eyes.

We dress to the eyes, but the most effective way of making them the focal point of our expression is by the right use of make-up. Some of the better class and fashionable cosmetic manufacturers have complete sets of make-up to harmonize with the color of the eyes. They believe the color of the eyes rather than the skin tones should determine the shade of powder and rouge.

The natural skin tones are really not matched perfectly. Scientists find in their tests that the skin coloring itself is something of a composite nature. When we make up color charts we take this into consideration, but the safe way to select make-up is to complement the eyes and you may be sure it will be flattering.

There are marvelous little make-up sets now to harmonize with the color of the eyes and this is really a smart way to purchase them. When one selects a suitable powder, it is nice to be sure that the rouge, lipstick and eyeshadow is the one that harmonizes with that shade.

Every successful screen and stage beauty knows the importance of emphasizing eye beauty.

You may have my Make-up Chart, if you wish, or the name of the matched Make-up Kit. There is no charge for it. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Married Comrades -:- By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 61

KATHERINE said that Mary would have to know at once of the plan to take the children to a New Hampshire mountain lake, because she would have to go along.

"I don't wonder you feel as if you were in a nose dive with the parachute broken," she said. "But I'll try to tell you all as soon as we get inside the door. How about it? Shall I spill the beans to you and Mary together, or would you rather hear the dope first?"

Mary sat down in the nearest chair, and looked from Katherine's face to mine.

"How come?" she demanded. "And—what about Noel?"

"Idiot!" Katherine retorted fondly, smiling at her. "Do you think we're planning an eternal separation from your handsome spouse? I shan't need you very long, just to help me get settled. But the apple blossoms will be gone. They're in their full beauty now, and they won't last much longer."

My heart echoed her words dolefully, for each spring I begrudge every falling blossom to the fruit beneath it. But there was no use regretting them. I must find out what Katherine wanted of me.

"Suppose we all sit down," I suggested briskly, "and find out what we are going to do. I know very little more than you do, Mary."

"And I'm sure of only three things," Katherine said, smiling. "When? Tomorrow morning. Where? Little Squsm lake in the New Hampshire foothills. Who? We three and the three children."

Mary whistled softly as we sat down.

"Is that an order?" she queried. "I'm all ears—also, I'm for it. Boy! what a name! You're sure the last letter isn't 'r'?" she finished with an impudent grin.

KATHERINE ENLIGHTENS

"Very sure," Katherine returned, "but I'm also sure you'll be able to find your favorite brothers up there. And now, I'll tell you all I know about it."

She relaxed into a comfortable position in her chair, and put her hands upon the arms. But both Mary and I sat forward with eager eyes fixed upon her face.

"Old Man Coincidence certainly was busy with his chores," Katharine began, "when he brought that letter from Neil Gibbs to me only twenty-four hours before this dilemma of Mr. Spencer's came up.

"Neil Gibbs—Neil Blanding she was when I knew her in our hospital training days," Katharine went on, "was the brainiest and pluckiest of all our class."

"We'll accept that with an amendment," I told her meaningly, and Mary added a sincerely explosive "Second that motion."

Slip Cover Color Scheme

BRIGHTEN up that room with a new color scheme in a slip cover on that small, comfortable chair, with smart curtains to match!

Chintz, cretonne, linen, rayon taffeta—they're all delightful. If there's green in the room, in walls or rugs, how about orchid and jade green on linen with a cream ground? If the room runs to grays, try chints in coral, gray and cream, with touches of black.

Dusty pink sprays on a cream ground are smart if your furniture is dark brown. Orange and yellow tones liven up a blue room. Plain taffetas in flower colors are lovely, too.

The chair sketched has such straight lines that it's easy as pie to cover. Pin the cloth right on the chair and cut it along seam lines. Then baste it up and stitch on the machine, making plackets at back. Plea a ruffle, as shown in sketch, to finish off the bottom. It's the daintiest finish for a small chair.

Do it right, with professional darts and tuck-ins, and your cover will be as smart as new upholstery.

Every detail made clear with diagrams and sketches. Covers for many kinds of chairs, sofas. One chapter on upholstering.

LEWIS HANEY ON WAGES

Higher Labor Prices
MEAN GREATER COSTS
Of Life's Needs

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 30—From Osseo, Wisconsin, came the following inquiries:

(1)—"In order that individuals may buy the surplus of commodities, they must be paid wages high enough to enable them to buy both currently produced commodities and past products. Will employers pay such wages?"

The answer is that wages have to be paid by somebody, and that they have to be in proportion to what labor produces.

If a laborer works for himself he becomes his own employer. He then finds that he only gets what he produces, after allowing for losses and cost of materials and equipment.

If he works for "the government," and the politicians pay him higher wages than his product justifies, they have to levy taxes which fall on other laborers.

* * *

Wages have to follow the economic laws of value, and there is no way to raise them arbitrarily to some desired figure, without hurting everybody.

In fact, if we raise money wages regardless of the value of labor's product, we increase the "cost of production." This makes it necessary to raise the price of the product. Then the laborer's money wages will buy less, and therefore his real wage is reduced again.

Another point is that not all "individuals" are laborers. If you take away the income of savers, professional men, and business men (including farm operators), and give it to laborers, these other classes will have less to spend. This offsets the higher money wages.

You should note that a "surplus" means that the commodity in question has a value that is lower than normal. The only way to get it bought is to let the price go low enough to reflect the low value. Then it will be bought and consumed. This must mean lower wages for the labor that is producing the commodity, unless the "employer" can temorarily bear a loss.

Employers will gladly pay wages according to (1) the value of the product, and (2) the importance of labor in making the product.

* * *

(2)—"Although the existing rotten system of 'work relief' is indefensible, is it not better than none at all? Isn't it necessary to take the profits of bankers and industrialists, and thus put money back into circulation, so that laborers may consume the commodities they produce?"

The answer is, no.

Any rotten and indefensible system is bad.

If you tax profits, you reduce the incentive of employers to engage in business, and you thus reduce employment and total wages earned. This, together with monetary uncertainty, is the great reason for unemployment today.

Labor does not produce all commodities. It has to be aided by capital and by business organization and direction. If you hurt these, you hurt all producers, including laborers.

* * *

Finally, taxes of this sort do not increase the circulation of money. First, they take money out of circulation when they are collected. Then, when the government spends, the money merely piles up in the banks as idle deposits, as it has been doing.

* * *

A New York reader asks: "Why do numerous well-known economists say that the United States should return to a gold standard? Is this possible now? Would it not do great harm?"

The vast majority of economists are strongly of the opinion that some definite and non-arbitrary standard is necessary for money, and believe that gold is the best standard now available.

It is probably not possible, however, to maintain any standard for money as long as a nation has an unbalanced budget. The existence of the present restrictions on international trade, and of "managed currencies" in other countries, is also a great difficulty, since one great function of the gold standard is to settle international balances of payment.

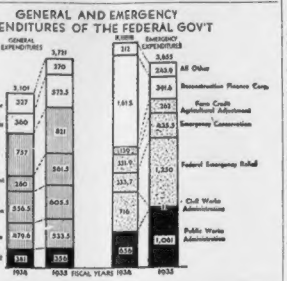
U. S. EXPENDITURES

EMERGENCY
Decline Is Shown For '35

"Emergency" expenditures of the Federal Government during the past two years exceed by over $550,000,000 the expenditures required to carry on the ordinary functions of the Federal Government.

The combined expenditures since 1934 amount to $14,198,000,000. The chart shows the distribution of general and emergency expenditures during the fiscal years of 1934 and 1935.

Emergency expenditures were smaller in 1935 due to the decline in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation operations. On the other hand, the Federal Emergency Relief and Public Works Administration spent $1,322,000,000 more in 1935 than they did in 1934.



Manufacturers' June Sales Up

Washington, July 30 (US)—Substantial gains in manufacturers' and wholesalers' June sales were disclosed in a joint survey made by the Department of Commerce and the National Association of Credit Men.

Total net sales of 1,090 reporting wholesale houses increased 19 per cent over June, 1935, and those of 543 manufacturers increased 33 per cent.

Of the wholesale trade groups covered by the survey, the building lines showed the most favorable improvement, though all except clothing and furnishing reported gains. Consumption goods showed the least favorable improvement.

In comparison with May, 1936, ten of the wholesale groups showed increases and nine decreases.

25 Years Ago

BUSINESS ACTIVITY
Generally Well Sustained

The First National, Boston, reporting mid-summer business "generally well sustained near the peak level of the depression period," said tonight it saw indications of "a vigorous upturn in the fall."

The bank's New England letter said:

"Business is in a strong position . . . Production and consumption are in good balance and in consequence should have a stabilizing influence upon commodity prices."

The bank pointed out that:

"Employment, according to the United States Bureau of Labor statistics, has increased for four consecutive months with the June figure at the highest level since October, 1930. Activity of representative industries for the first six months was the highest for the comparable period since 1930. "Steel mill activity in June was at the highest level for that month since 1929, when the industry was operating at full capacity . . . Production of motor vehicles in the United States and Canada for the first half of the year was the highest on record with the exception of the first six months of 1929 . . . The building industry is showing definite signs of revival."

The report added that "Wool consumption by the New England mills in June was 18 per cent above the preceding month, or considerably more than the usual increase for that period of the year. Cotton mills are very active. Operations are in excess of 100 per cent of single shift capacity, with a comfortable backlog of orders on the books. Prices are firm but profit margins for the industry as a whole continue narrow.

"Shoe production in June nearly equalled that of May, while usually there is a decline of about 10 per cent during this period. Retail trade is running about 10 per cent above a year ago."

Wall Street Hears

New York, July 30 (INS)—That combined first half earnings of 13 major steel companies were close to $50,000,000, or nearly three times the total of a year ago.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, July 30—Department and other general merchandise stores are looking for heavier profits in the second half of this year than they have been able to make in the past four or five.

This is clearly indicated in the trend of present commitments in the wholesale markets. The public will be in a better position to spend in the next six months than they have at any time since 1929. As a result, a good portion of the orders are for better-priced, so-called quality merchandise, on which stores can obtain a much larger mark-up above cost than they can on medium-priced goods which have constituted most of their sales in the past five years. Another indication of this trend is to be found in preliminary reports on planned advertising programs. Most of the larger retail concerns have indicated they plan to place emphasis on quality, very definitely de-emphasizing the "goods at a price" appeal which has been the chief stress in retail advertising since the slump set in. Despite increased taxes, etc., most observers feel retail stores will end 1936 further on the profit side of the ledger than they have been since 1929.

Drouth Effect on Corn Products

The drouth will be felt hardest by package food and cereal companies whose chief products are made from corn, such as Corn Products Refining Co., those in the food trades feel. Bread manufacturers will suffer to some extent from smaller bread wheat supplies. Others, such as canners and meat packers, are expected to lift prices sufficiently to cover increased raw material cost. The reason why producers such as Corn Products will suffer hardest, those in the trade state, is because they will be unable to keep advancing finished product prices fast enough to keep pace with the already substantial rise in corn. The company has already made some additional rise in its prices, but these are regarded as insufficient to equalize the corn rise. Further rises are expected, but the trade feels there will still be a substantial differential which cannot be passed on in a lump to consumers. In addition, the indicated corn crop is decidedly smaller than last year at present, with the crop damage still spreading.

* * *

Want Surcharges Made Permanent

The nation's railroads this week took a step long expected in traffic and shipping circles, and asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to clear the way for the putting of the emergency freight rates on a permanent basis. The emergency rates, which yield the carriers around $100,000,000 annually, were first inaugurated in April, 1935. They were scheduled to expire the first day of the present month, but the I. C. C., in a 7 to 2 decision, extended them until December 31 of this year. The commission, in making this most recent extension of the rates, refused to "indefinitely" extend the charges, but, instead, authorized them for the definite additional period of six months more. Whether the emergency rates will be written into the permanent freight tariff structure of the carriers remains to be seen. It is felt by many in official circles that the emergency charges tend to divert traffic to the rails.

Workers' Fight Keeps Plant Shut

Owens-Illinois Glass Co. is the unwitting victim of a new kind of labor trouble at its Toledo bottle cap plant, which has kept the plant closed since July 3. The trouble is between two unions. The unions have no quarrel with the company. Yesterday a petition was sent to the Secretary of Labor by 463 employes of the plant, asking for an election to determine which of two American Federation of Labor unions should represent the 800 workers. Idle since July 3 when a fight for jurisdiction between the two unions shut down the plant, the Owens-Illinois Company officials say if an election is held immediately, the plant can be reopened by next Monday.

EASTERN S. S.

New Stock ISSUE IS Planned

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Directors of the Eastern Steamship Lines have notified stockholders that after consulting the largest holders of the company's securities they are recommending the creation of a new convertible preferred stock issue.

This new stock will be a $2 no-par preferred and will replace the $3.50 no-par preferred now outstanding, thus effecting a savings in interest for the company.

A. A. Sharp, president of Eastern, in the letter to stockholders points out that it will be for the best interests of the company to take this step which will eventually lead to its having only one class of stock outstanding. The conversion privileges of the contemplated issue provide for an exchange for 2-1-3 common shares in the year beginning October 1, 1937, 2 shares in the two following years and 2½ shares thereafter. The past nine years Eastern has made steady progress in rearranging its capital structure, having retired all bonded indebtedness and first preferred stock in the hands of the public.

The bond market has been loafing again. Using the charts of the Associated Press averages it appears that industrials neglected an opportunity to work a shade higher to a new peak. Utilities have pulled a sidewise course for nearly three weeks after setting a new peak. We want them to turn up again since the equities of the industry are obviously undervalued when the senior securities do nothing. Rails balked just when it looked as though all was well. They flattened out one-half a point under their old high set in February. More pep is needed here to bolster the bull cause.

Notebook: American Can has been stubborn of late . . . However, it could react to 128-130 without doing anyone any damage . . . And if a good brand of support is witnessed at that level or sellers fail to generate a following, we would look for the long awaited move to 140 . . . Chartists who said 125 was a hard spot for Chrysler are willing to allow for a dip to around 60-62 has long been an important area in the market life of U. S. Steel . . . Some technical market observers feel they would like to see it react to that level now . . . Good support will bring about lack into the issue with a rush.

• • •

The rapid fire action of stock prices is not recruiting now buyers. When the market has a reaction as fast as that of yesterday and Monday on a bounce such as on the following day, as it did today, cautious traders and investors generally make a rush to the sidelines. This is only natural. But the trouble is these fast reactions present buying opportunities that are ignored. And bring later regrets. For the present the market need is higher, and until it has progressed to a point where the supply of stocks presents a major problem we would buy the fast reactions.

• • •

Ticker Ticks: The rails continue as our favorites . . . And we again stress the advisability of having a line of these stocks . . . Southern Railway issues have behaved splendidly and are most attractive . . . Central is in a nice position to swing up to a new peak . . . Lines covering Ford is one of the better acting specialties that should be held . . . Western Union if obtainable around 39 seems worth while . . . Good utilities are not through . . . Technical indications are still favorable and we expect higher prices in this division before the current leg of the advance is over.

STOCKS Move HIGHER AVIATIONS FEATURE

New York, July 30 — Amusement and aviation shares led a stock market recovery today as many losses sustained in yesterday's setback were recouped in pivotal issues. Gains in many instances ran to more than a point and to more than 2 in special situations.

Strength in aviation shares reflected belief that army and navy contracts will be released earlier than usual. Boeing and Douglas gained about a point each.

Steel shares rebounded under the lead of U. S. Steel, which advanced a point. Bethlehem and Republic were fractionally improved.

Motors were led upward by Chrysler and General Motors, the former spurring more than a point. Rails and utilities made moderate progress on the upside. Alcohols, particularly American Commercial Alcohol, were strong.

Timely Topics

Among items studied in the boardrooms prior to the start of trading were

Foreign copper producers, operating under the restriction agreement, will step up output to 75 per cent from the current permitted rate of 70 per cent because of increased consumption of the red metal in a number of European countries.

June shipments of fabricated structural steel were the largest for any month since August, 1931, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported.

Total sales of department stores in the New York Federal Reserve District for the first half of this year were estimated to have increased 8.9 per cent from the corresponding 1935 period.

Announcement that the government's cotton producer pool has completed liquidation of both its spot and future holdings.

The French franc was off .00 5-16 of a cent at 6.59¼ cents, and sterling was 3-16 of a cent easier at $5.01⅜.

Sloan Warns Against False Booms

New York, July 30 (INS)—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, was enroute to Europe today after delivering an admonition that America must move slowly and steadily forward to avoid a false boom.

Sailing aboard the S. S. Queen Mary, Sloan gave his answer to a question on whether the nation was now in a period of artificial prosperity:

"Yes, more or less. Actually the reaction to the depression has been tied lightly and gradually are getting better, so much better now it's about as high as we can safely anticipate.

Liquor Exports

Canadian exports of alcoholic beverages, chiefly whiskey, during June totaled in value $838,000, against $2,098,000 in May, and $615,000 in June, 1935, according to Dominion bureau of statistics.

Comments of Brokers

We doubt that the reaction will go much further, but traders might play safe and defer new commitments until there are definite indications that the adjustment is over.

J. S. Wilson-Josephthal & Co.

We regard the current setback as an excellent opportunity to complete trading lines, in anticipation of higher prices during the new and the middle of next month.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

For the present, profit taking in pivotal issues during rallying periods would be in order for nimble swing traders, and such a course should be pursued until a more definite trend is obtained relative to the completion of the anticipated corrective reaction.—L. S. Fergus-Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

Advise a constructive trading policy, unless any further dips to make new commitments. For leadership of the next rally, regard the active rails as likely candidates.—H. D. Comer-Paine, Weber & Co.

Minor technical corrections such as experienced yesterday are to be expected and should be used to add to long pull commitments.—J. F. Maher-Shields & Co.

"Stop Fumbling With Recovery," Says Landon

Record Shows Little Progress in Creating Work Since 1933, Declares Governor

There is no future on the relief rolls.

The law of this world is that man shall eat bread by the sweat of his brow.

The whole American people want to work at full time and a. full pay.

They want homes, and a chance for their children, reasonable security, and the right to live according to American standards.

They want to share in a steady progress.

We bind ourselves with a pledge we shall not ignore, thrust aside, or forget, to devote our whole energy to bringing these things about.

It cannot be measured in stock market prices.

The real test is to be found in the ability of the average American to engage in business, to obtain a job, to be self-supporting and a self-respecting member of his community.

Judged by the things that make us a nation of happy families, the New Deal has fallen far short of success.

The record shows that in 1933 the primary need was jobs for the unemployed.

—From Governor Alfred M. Landon's speech accepting the Republican Presidential nomination, Topeka, July 23, 1936.

Governor Landon shows a far deeper insight into the American character than the "regimenters" of the present Administration, when he says that the American people want to work for themselves, earn a decent living, stand on their own feet, preserve their self-respect.

THAT CANNOT BE DONE ON RELIEF.

It can be done only by CREATING JOBS AND OPPORTUNITIES in private industry.

However relief may be disguised and dressed up, it remains CHARITY, and those who feel that most keenly are the great majority of relief recipients themselves.

Yet the policy of the Administration, if JUDGED BY DEEDS, NOT WORDS, has been to keep people ON relief rather than to get them OFF relief.

The story of this nation-wide tragedy is best told in the two pictures at the top of this page—told more graphically than by volumes of campaign invective.

In July, 1933, General Hugh Johnson, speaking presumably for his chief, Mr. Roosevelt, promised to have six million unemployed back at work by Labor Day of that year.

By Labor Day, however, ten million were still out of work, and two years after General Johnson's glowing promise was made, nine million, eight hundred and fifty-five thousand were in the same plight.

The facts may have been even worse than these figures indicate, if the American Federation of Labor's statistics are accepted.

THEY put unemployment for that period at MORE THAN TWELVE MILLION.

Not much chance for self-respecting Americans on relief to "stand on their own feet" in such circumstances.

Not much prospect of their "working full time at full pay," or living "according to American standards," when the Administration's experimenting blocks real recovery.

As for the bill which has been run up by the Tugwells, the Hopkinses and the Farleys for this colossal fiasco, the pictures in the lower half of the page give you the bad news.

In place of the balanced budgets so plainly promised the nation, the government has spent in THREE years almost as much as it had previously spent in ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE years—and the relief problem is still unsolved.

That is the price of Administration folly, which every American, rich, poor, employed, jobless—even generations of Americans yet unborn—must pay.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Not being an athlete I do not suppose I should have any opinion about the Eleanor Holm Jarrett imbroglio. And as a matter of fact, I haven't particularly. It is interesting, of course, to watch the way various individuals, official and unofficial, seem to have made up their minds on the subject.

The principal subject at issue seems to be whether the discipline of college and school athletics should be applicable to mature and experienced persons presumably out of tutelage. The college athlete, of course, has various persons over him in what used to be called loco parentis, just like college presidents and instructors and all belonging to that end of the academic system.

That presumably is as it should be. If you are going to wear the colors and strive to wear the numerals of a school or college, you have got to carry on under the rules of the college

Way It Was Done Ruffles Feelings

Of those rules the one having to do with proper training for athetic events is not one of the least important and is generally accepted as such. No training, no membership on the team —and that's that.

Whether such requirements are really applicable to grown-up contestants who are voluntarily representing some private athletic organization and have won the right in competition to represent America in the Olympic contests, is another matter.

It is the way in which the thing was done, rather than the thing done, that seems to have ruffled the feelings of various commentators

I think we may assume that the possibility that the girl's breaking training would make her a less efficient contender in the games does not really enter seriously into the discussion. The Olympic Committee was afraid of public criticism, found an opportunity to its hand where discipline could be justified, and made an individual the scape-goat. The problem was moral and social rather than athletic. There is where argument comes in.

Of course, Mrs. Jarrett's point is one which will appeal to many who believe that the dogmas of American athletic training are too severe. It is possible that the athletes of no other country are kept under such a severe regimen as has become customary over here.

Champagne Prescribed By His Physician

In the letter column of a New York newspaper I read the other day the testimony of a member of the baseball team of 1911 at Harvard. He states almost without comment the simple fact that the official physician of the baseball team, Dr. Channing Frothingham, prescribed champagne for him at dinner.

"Champagne was served to me at the training table for several weeks without expense to me. The result was a great improvement in my batting. Incidentally, Harvard defeated Yale that year both in New Haven and at Soldier's Field."

If there is a non-sequitur there I know too little about either baseball or logic to argue the point. The proof of the champagne seems to have been in the batting. I expect to see the champagne advertisements blossoming forth with strong backing of the idea.

It is an idea which Mrs. Jarrett would seem to agree with.

One reads from time to time tales how English trainers in crew or track occasionally order malt liquors all round with presumably successful results.

'All Seems to Be 'A Bit Prussian

I doubt whether any continental training systems, where their feeling about liquors has never been subjected to what might be called the W. C. T. U. attitude, are as severe as ours. Indeed, it is a question how far the temperance movement over here has affected the point of view of medical and athletic authorities.

True, by and large, the system seems to work in this country, if our records are any criteria. But, at bottom, that is the question, the efficacy of the system in the breaking of records. Under the circumstances the disciplinary angle, which has been brought into the foreground, seems less important.

It all seems a bit Prussian to me. It is too easy to remember that the gentleman who put Mrs. Jarrett off the team is the one who aroused considerable criticism by giving the Nazis an enthusiastic endorsement.

CROWDS See Holy Land EXHIBIT

The Holy Land exhibit at Horticultural Hall, Massachusetts and Huntington avenues, Back Bay, is drawing enthusiastic crowds during its final week in Boston.

Fear of missing the exhibit during the few remaining days of its stay here, is causing many visitors both singly and in groups to make special trips from their home towns within 100 miles of Boston and more, in order to view it.

Among those who made special trips were Mr. and Mr. Arthur Peltier, of 4 Whittier street, Amesbury, with several friends. Mr. Peltier.

"It was well worth the trip from home. There was no disappointment. Rather far beyond what we expected. The exhibit is complete in every detail. Especially the scene on Mt. Calvary, which was wonderful."

Another was Mrs. F. B. Watters, of 30 Fernleaf avenue, Longmeadow, Mass., who headed a party of friends, whose enthusiasm after viewing the exhibit drew forth the comment

"It proved more than I expected and I would like to stay all day viewing it. The exhibit could be used for a community pageant for children during Christmas or the Lenten season, and I would like to arrange for a showing in my home section, if it would be possible."

From West Yarmouth, Mass., came Miss Jessie Bright, pastor of the Full Gospel Church, Pentecostal, of South Dennis, who visited the Holy Land five years ago. Said Miss Bright:

"It seemed like renewing old acquaintances, with familiar spots and scenes brought back again through recollection of a personal visit to the Holy Land. I would recommend any churchman to visit it."

Miss Betty Wilson, of Kittery, Maine declared:

"It is the most beautiful and educational thing I have yet seen in all my religious experience."

"My first visit, but hope not my last, to this wonderful exhibit. I will urge all my friends to see it," said Miss Marguerite A. Gunn, of 1052 Bennington street, East Boston.

And to Mrs. Mary Walsh, of 677 Fifth street, South Boston

"This is my third visit and each time it proves more interesting."

In a burst of ecstatic joy, Mrs. J. O'Donnell, of 1989 Dorchester avenue, exclaimed:

"I thought I was looking at Heaven"

Miss Mary Mulroy, of 50 Filbert street, expressed it as

Girl, 15, Lands 342-Lb. Tuna

Reels In Record Catch

ELLEN BRUCE
Gets Bigger Fish Than President

A 15-year-old girl arrived in Boston on the steamship Evangeline today and told how she caught a tuna weighing 342 pounds in the same waters where President Roosevelt failed to catch a big one.

She is Ellen Bruce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bruce, of New York city.

She reeled in the huge fish off Wedgeport, N. S. after a struggle lasting two hours and 53 minutes.

Ellen is a sturdy outdoor girl who has done lots of fishing, but had never fished for tuna before.

"I made her leave that fish behind," said her mother, with a laugh. "I didn't want to spend the rest of my life making tuna fish salad."

Little Time Left to See Holy Land Exhibit

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

This week is your last opportunity to visit the beautiful Holy Land exhibit at Horticultural Hall. This marvelous display, re-enacting the story of Holy Land, may never come to Boston again. This scene shows Helen Miecznowski, guide, interpreting one of the many displays for visitors.

CITY OFFICIALS HONOR REILLY

City officials today attended the funeral of Timothy M. Reilly, father of Frank Reilly, of the Boston Evening American staff, held from his home, 69 East Brookline street, South End.

A requiem mass was celebrated at 9 45 a. m. in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross by the Rev. Harry M. O'Connor, and the Cathedral was crowded

Pallbearers were Charles Dunn, William Dunn, John Barry, Cornelius Manning, James Leary and Timothy Leary, old friends of the deceased, who, until retirement six years ago, was president of Reilly Bros., Inc., pioneers in Boston chain restaurant business

Among those attending were President John I. Fitzgerald of the city council, acting mayor; Joseph Mellyn, secretary to Mayor Mansfield, Arthur O'Keefe, director of public celebrations; Cyril Cummings, assistant secretary to Mayor Mansfield; Forrest P. Hull, editor of the City Record; Park Commissioner William P. Long and delegations from Boston newspapers.

Among many floral tributes were one from Mayor Mansfield, cabled from abroad, and one from Governor Curley, as well as others from city officials and from Frank Reilly's co-workers in the press room at City Hall.

Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Reading detective stories used to be considered exclusively the relaxation of a lowbrow. If such books were your weakness, you read them in the sanctity of your room, as small boys used to read their bootlegged Nick Carters in the barn. How times have changed!

MARJORIE McBRIDE

George Lyman Kittredge is retiring professor of English literature at Harvard, and an outstanding authority on Shakespeare. John Livingston Lowes is also a professor of English literature at the university. He specializes in Chaucer.

At a recent Harvard conference, called to enlighten young instructors as to the solemn beauties of the language, Lowes and Kittredge got into a discussion of mystery story construction and technique that soon had all the young hopefuls taking sides, and neither Chaucer nor Shakespeare were mentioned.

Both Lowes and "Kitty" are detective story fans, and don't care who know it. Each has a fine collection of such stories, old and modern. Another Harvard professor draws out all the new mystery books at a certain Cambridge lending library each Monday and returns them Friday, giving the clerk a brief criticism of each one.

Curley Seldom Misses Good Detective Yarn

If you've heard this clerk's sales talk on certain detective stories, it may flatter you to know the verdict is that of one of the great critics of English, whose name is in several encyclopedias.

Woodrow Wilson, of course, made the reading of detective novels respectable. Governor Curley seldom misses a new one that's any good. Boston church dignitaries while away time helping the fictional detective track down the mythical murderer.

A good many men who enjoy detective stories start libraries exclusively devoted to such fiction. James J. Egan, manager of the dog track at Taunton, has such a collection.

So there's no need to apologize for a leaning in the direction of these yarns. If you are at this moment waiting impatiently to find out who murdered the captain of the crew, and the passengers, too, of the good ship "Hoopla," you're in the best of company!

Woman's Travel Club Organized in Boston

A Woman's Travel Club, the first of its kind in America, has been organized in Boston. Gertrude E. Roche is president. Members include women representatives of leading steamship and railway lines. The idea is to be copied elsewhere.

Out-of-towners attending first nights in Manhattan theaters sometimes are unable to follow the show . . . they're that fascinated by the display of diamonds and other signs of wealth in the boxes.

The Cape Playhouse in Dennis is only a summer theater, but it's located in the middle of the richest vacationing ground in the world and a new play brings out a crowd that could buy up all the playhouses in New York without having to sell a single yacht.

At a recent Monday night premiere, Raymond Moore, the founder, was asked about the house. He astonished the Boston reporter by remarking casually:

Brockton Woman Wins "Knock" Prize

Now about this "Knock, Knock" business. Girl-About-Town's contest for puns on the song "Knock, Knock, Who's There?" brings forth three prize winners today.

"Knock, Knock, Who's There? Lydia, Lydia Who? Lydia conscience be your guide" . . . is sent in by Lillian Hooper of Winifred road, Brockton.

Each will receive $2 for their amusing answers to this daffy contest. If you've got one of these puns in your system, too, jot it down and mail it to Marjorie McBride. The more, the merrier!

Animated Tin Type:

Honus Wagner Steps Out of the Album

THE OLD GENTLEMAN WITH THE Father Goose features and the parenthetical legs, looked like a gargoyle on a Gothic cathedral. He finished feeding baseballs to the Pittsburgh pitchers during batting practice and came over to sit on the edge of the grandstand piperails, while a swarm of pantaloon kids came down to get his signature.

Austen Lake

White-haired, grizzled of chin and benevolent as a grandfather, Honus Wagner is 62 now, but spry, leathery and lean as a steer's flank. He had a kind word to say for the modern ball players, whom he finds superior to the old time buckos of his own playing time. Team work is improved, he says, and the type of barfly who infested the game in his youth is replaced by a well-behaved set of commercial athletes, who are smarter in the head and give the fans a uniformly better brand of play for their dollars.

The surly, rebellious attitude of the teams, he says, has been replaced by docile, workmanlike competence, and the teams no longer connive to spike each other or feud through the season like rival mountain clans.

And he said the club manager of his time had been a combination house dick, keyhole peeker, police magistrate and knuckle duster in addition to his dugout duties. The better hotels wouldn't take the teams because the more mischievous spirits tore up the bedsheets, played all night poker, yanked midnight fire alarms and assaulted pedestrians with waterfilled papersacks from the upstairs windows.

* * *

HONUS'S RUGGED INDIVIDUALISM

THE OLD IMMORTAL ADDED THAT the kids in today's game fielded and hit on a higher plane than the old time teams, on which the stars stood out prominently because they were placed in inferior settings. And he thought that a modern major league outfit would give most of the old time teams a sound licking in a seven game series, being generally shrewder, better conditioned, and more efficient in the game's fine arts.

Rather astounding coming from one of baseball's original 49'ers? But Honus has the Teuton trait of candor. And once, during his prime, he refused a $500 fee for indorsing a certain brand of cigarets, because he said, he didn't smoke cigarets and regarded them as unwholesome—both for kids and grownups. And once in 1927 when a Pittsburgh paper paid him to cover the World Series, and offered him a ghost writer, old Honus spurned the forgery and wrote the articles himself. I know this because he sat immediately behind me at Forbes Field and scrawling his copy with a pencil stub clamped in his warped fingers. It wasn't literary copy, according to the journalistic standard, but it was sound, earthy comment, refreshing for its stilted style.

STILL ATHLETIC AT 62

AT AN AGE WHEN MOST MEN BEGIN to nurse their aching shins beside the kitchen stove and mumble over their barley gruel, Honus still plays an occasional game of exhibition ball. I recall seeing him pinch hit in the Pirates' lineup two seasons ago in the South, standing at the plate, legs spread and arms akimbo, like a figure out of an old English sporting print. And then he had slashed a solid, two-base hit and raced around to second with his bandy-legged gallop, while thousands cheered.

Another extraordinary belief of the old man is that a batsman is never a truly great hitter until he learns to hit bad balls, pitches which cross the plate outside the strike zone, which is a rectangle formed between knee and shoulders and above the plate.

"I made as many base hits on bad pitches as I made on good ones," said Honus, squirting an amber jet through his teeth. "Every great hitter does the same. I tell the kids, 'If you can reach it you can hit it.'"

This conforms with Babe Ruth's remark in St. Petersburg last year. "If I waited for a good pitch I'd never hit a home run," he told me. And the Babe had confessed that three-quarters of his homers were belted on balls that most batters would have ignored.

* * *

HE USES THE BACK STREETS

DON'T LOOK FOR HONUS IN THE uptown hotel where the Pittsburgh club stops. Though gracious when cornered, he has a mortal terror of "ear benders" and will probably be found feeding peanuts to the pigeons on the Common, and sitting with the solitary dignity of an old circus lion on Fenway grass.

When the Pittsburgh fans set up such a clamor in 1933 that the club hastily hired him as a coach and clubhouse philosopher, every city in the league tossed him banquets as the team made its first league tour. And though Honus sat patiently as the guest of honor and rose to say a few tactful nothings, he squirmed internally and hated the fuss. So that he took to walking down alleys and back streets rather than risk being recognized. And when he comes to Boston he rises in the cool of the morning before sun-up and goes fishing on Jamaica Pond, by special permission of the park department, bringing his catch home to the hotel and dining on perch and eels.

OUTBOARD ARISTOCRACY. Tommy Tyson, above, is one of the Tyson family which has been identified with outboard racing for many years. His dad is a nationally recognized judge at all big regattas and his both sisters race in addition to himself. The family will all participate in the William Randolph Hearst Regatta here this coming week-end.

As a result, Manager Joe Cronin will send Wes Ferrell to the hill today instead of saving him for the opener against the White Sox tomorrow. Wes will have Jack Knott for an opponent.

Cronin will not make any changes in his lineup today, as yesterday's loss was due entirely to the fact that the Browns got an early start on Lefty Ostermueller, and Jack Hogsett pitched brilliantly enough to maintain his lead.

Young Jack Kramer continued to shine. He handled four chances faultlessly, and in addition secured two hits. In fact, he was the only member of the millionaires able to connect for more than one safety.

Yesterday's loss hurt the box ... greatly in their battle to reach ... second place, due to the fact that the Indians took a double-header from the Senators to strengthen their second place hold over the Red Sox, who are now three full games away.

Regatta Days Ahead

Stars Gather for Hearst Races Here This Week-End

WOMAN PRO READY TO GO. Miss Mary Codd, only woman professional outboard racer, will take part in the second annual Hearst regatta which takes place on the Charles River Basin next Saturday, Sunday and Monday under the auspices of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Motorboat Racers Tune Up For Charles River Regatta

GINGRAS HAS VERY FAST CRAFT

By WALTER KILEY

From the West Coast and the South, the North, the East and as far distant as British Columbia waters, heads a procession of nationally famous, death-defying artists of the motorboat realm, converging on Boston for the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser regatta over the weekend.

Amateur and professional alike turn to the Charles River basin, their hopes of fame and gain hardly exceeding the sheer exuberance of their spirits as they prepare for the thrills and spills of this most hazardous sport.

There will be racing on Saturday and Sunday.

First of the invaders to arrive is Hugh E. Gingras of Philadelphia, a comparative newcomer to the select ranks, but one who already has cut a wide swath through the competitive waters of Lake George, New York.

Gingras driving George C. Cannon's Snail II, of New Rochelle, captured first honors in the 225-cubic-inch class from nine of the tidiest stepping inboards of the nation last Sunday. He took over a good lead in both of his heats and never was headed.

With the Snail II securely lashed to his trailer, Gingras hove on the Charles horizon this morning. And immediately started priming for the Sunday afternoon feature event. He was joined by several others in workouts.

Young Coast Ferguson, tops of the amateurs a year ago, puts on the finishing touches today at John's Pond, Falmouth, where the roar of his cut-out, barking out in the stills allences of the secluded Cape Cod section, sends a warning message to his famous rivals.

Optimistic of the biggest entry list in the history of motor boat racing, and with the finest cash and merchandise awards ever offered in similar competition, Lindberg and his associates have perfected details in thoroughly workmanlike manner.

New custom built buoys, easily visible, with anti-fouling orange flags of warning, outline the various courses, a great improvement on those used last season.

Captain Chapman of the Metropolitan District Commission Police and Roy Pidgeon, representing the American Power Boat Association, have completed details for policing the course and assuring the safety of the drivers.

Today Lindberg was confident of receiving several outstanding entries from the field which took part in the Gold Cup races at Lake George. Most of them assured him that they would be on hand.

Reports from all the previously held regattas throughout the country indicate that last year's list of 214 starters will be easily surpassed.

The opportunity to try for world records on the spacious reaches of the Lake Quinsigamond mile course on Monday—an innovation this year—has added glamour.

FERGUSON IN WORKOUTS ON CAPE

Only those finishing 1—2—3 in the competitive racing on the Charles will be eligible for the Worcester trials in the 225s.

The Union Boat Club, handy to the lagoon, has been made available to all competitors both their clubhouse and pier.

Hotel headquarters is to be regatta headquarters. There will be installed the nation's motor boat capital for three full days, three days of the most exciting sport that this staid old town has ever witnessed.

Murphy Winner Of Arena Clash

Bruno was disqualified for ungentlemanly conduct in the first fall and Murphy captured the second in eight minutes 15 seconds.

29 Massachusetts Golfers Left in Amateur Tourney

LESLIE DOUTY CARRIED TO 19TH HOLE

By BILL GRIMES

Portland July 30—Although Freddie Wright Jr., six times winner of the Bay State Amateur Crown was numbered among the first round casualties, Massachusetts has a number of "aces" in the hole starting today's rounds in the 11th annual New England Amateur Championship at the Portland Country Club.

Going into the second round this morning, there were 29 Bay State players in the field when Sam Bowers drew Hal Mundy a crown and was defeated.

In the upper quarter of the draw Allan V. Esty, The Country Club is pairing Ed Varney, the acting pro from Rochester, N. H., who went 22 holes before winning over L. H. Wellard, Sanford Me., in the first round.

Norwood E. Kellenberger Salem has a real assignment on his hands with Joe Martin, Mass. pro, R. I., who was a quarter finalist in last year's "Hearst." Martin posted a 72 while defeating C. W. Birch, Stamford, Conn., yesterday and should run over Mr. Kellenberger.

Leo Brown, Sandy Burr, whose game is ideal for this course, is pairing K. H. McNeil, Connecticut, this morning. Leo pushed out George West, Waterville, in the first round, without coming out of first speed, winning 7 and 5.

There is an all Massachusetts match in progress this morning between Alfred Crossley, Norfolk runner up in the state open championship at Oak Hill and Dan Shea Jr., South Shore. Neither Crossley nor Shea saw service yesterday, the former winning by default and the latter drawing a bye.

Crossley has the call over Dan, Jr., but if the South Shore star is on his game, he's liable to cause a big upset.

Leslie Douty, the 1935 "Hearst" champion, is playing Frank Rose, Wampanoag, Conn., the 1934 New England amateur champion. After going to the turn in 38 yesterday Douty let down and was carried to the 19th hole by Ray Lemieux Waterville Me.

Gerry Anderson a former caddy and junior champion of the Bay State who came from behind to defeat Johnny Brown, Portland, 1 up has W. L. Scott, Manchester N. H., as his second round opponent and is favored to stay in the running.

Francis "Ancy" Doyle, Wachusett has the toughest assignment of any of the Bay State players. He's out with Bobby Grant, the 1932 titlist from Wethersfield, Conn., one of the best amateurs in this section. Doyle eliminated Joe Melanson, Wolfeboro, N. H., the Granite State champion 1 up yesterday and is apparently at the peak of his form while Grant put out Royce Abbott, Auburn, Maine, 4 and 3

In the second quarter, there's another all-Massachusetts match for Joe Fay, Woodland, is playing Leo Martin, Sandy Burr. Leo packs too many guns for Joe and should weather this morning round handily. Just behind the Fay-Martin match is Johnny McNiff, North Shore, who is tangling with Dom Soccoli, the conqueror of Freddie Wright.

Young Steve Sleeper, The Country Club, has a chance to make a name for himself this morning by beating Holy Mandly, the defending champion. Steve walked through Ken Morse, Weston, yesterday, by piling up a four-hole lead during the first nine

Steve hasn't played any competitive golf this season but after a week at The Country Club he seems to be back on his game and will give the Connecticut public links champion a stiffer battle than more of the followers of the game expect.

Joe Lynch, Blue Hill, and Ted Bishop, Trapelo, are the best Massachusetts bets in the third quarter. Bishop, who beat Paige Weal, Portland, 2 up yesterday, is playing Tony Kosinsky, Bridgeport, and this match promises to be one of the best of the second round. Lynch looks ripe to go places in this championship. He hung a four and three defeat on Herb Lord, Beaconsfield, Wachusett, in the first round and is playing J. A. Abbott, Manchester, N. H., this morning.

Down in the lower quarter the Bay State has Eddie Martin, Judge Joseph W. Monahan, both representing Sandy Burr, and Eddie Lowery, Charles River. Eddie Martin put out Ted Schorer, Hartford, Ct., in the first round, and is out with Isaac Merrill, Camden, Me., this morning, but both Monahan and Lowery drew first round byes.

Judge Monahan is playing Bill Means, Jr., Greenwich, Ct., who cracked up in his plane on the 16th fairway late Tuesday afternoon Apparently, he escaped injury, for he eliminated J. G. Lee, Jr., Danbury, Ct., 1 up yesterday, and is all primed to tackle the Sandy Burr long hitter.

Hearst Golf

Wachusett Entry List Lagging

By WILL CONNELL

A fresh avalanche of entries rolled in today for the fourth Hearst Junior Golf championship of New England, which opens on Monday next at the Wachusett Country Club.

The Wachusett affair is the first of four qualifying tests with the others at Blue Hill Country Club in Canton on August 10, Merrimack Valley Country Club in Methuen on August 13, and Metacomet Golf Club in East Providence on August 17.

Fields of well over 200 at each of these rounds are expected, with the exception of Wachusett. The entries up to today were slow from that sector of New England, and unless there were 80 or more by midnight, the tourney committee planned to eliminate the round.

Outstanding items regarding the Hearst Juniors are:

1—Every boy who has not reached his 19th birthday is eligible.

2—There is absolutely no entry or greens fee, and this, with the several qualifying points, makes it possible for all eligible to compete.

3—There will be low medal, and a number of other awards, and the principal trophies for winner and runnerup.

DEFEAT FOR U. S. SEEN AT BERLIN

Mr. Boston

Curley Set for Rivals

—By JACK CONWAY—

GOVERNOR CURLEY won't ask for a handicap when he takes on all-comers at golf at Governor's Day at Sandy Burr on August 18. The governor, as a matter of record, doesn't ask for handicaps in any game in which he participates, whether it is sports or politics. He always has plenty of confidence in his ability to win, and usually does.

I wish to report the Governor is whacking the little white spots right on the nose, and should get a 90 in the tourney at Sandy Burr. I am still apologizing for picking the Governor to end up with a 92 last year at Sandy Burr when he came through with a 91. I still insist Joe Tinilly kicked a ball out of the rough which made the 91 possible. Otherwise the final count would have been 92

After witnessing the Governor do a little limbering up at The Belfast Country Club under the watchful eye of Jack Leary I don't hesitate to give him a 90 for the Sandy Burr affair. Of course if Governor Greene of Rhode Island insists that Governor Curley play him at tennis this extra exercise may throw my calculations off a stroke or so.

I would suggest, though, that if Governor Greene insists upon playing tennis that he take Jimmy Roosevelt as an opponent. The latter is a good tennis player.

I would not care to suggest to Tom Green or Joe Mulhern that they play tennis as they might challenge me, and then I would be gone.

Gus White says the youngsters who will compete in the Hearst junior golf championship at Sandy Burr would gladly give any of those persons who wish to compete on Governor's Day a few lessons. These boys shoot from 70 to 75, and get very much upset when in the high 70's.

Sharkey Bout

I REGRET I shall be unable to shoot my usual 105 on Governor's Day at Sandy Burr. While those who compete are still playing the nineteenth hole, I shall have my nose against the ring as Jack Sharkey takes his fling at "Bomber" Joe Louis in a ten-round bout at the Yankee Stadium.

Walter St. Dennis, publicity director of the Twentieth Century Club which is conducting the show with the co-operation of the Milk Fund, called me on the long distance telephone from New York. Walter was anxious to get some pictures of the way Sharkey who has been training at Buckley's Gym

I asked Walter about the interest in the show in New York

"Sharkey and Louis will draw $250,000," replied St Dennis. "Everybody is anxious to see how Louis will fare against the new Sharkey. I didn't see Sharkey lick Brubaker, but they tell me the Squire looked like his old self. Sharkey always did have plenty of class, and when he had one of his good nights he could beat anybody.

"Louis will also have the thought way back in his head that Sharkey has licked Schmeling, the man who knocked him out, and that he also tripped up Harry Wills and George Godfrey when they were rated as pretty fair fighting men."

Sharkey will shove off for his training camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., on Saturday. He is already down to 201 pounds and shouldn't have any difficulty reducing to 198 pounds for Louis.

Louis will return to Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he prepared for his winning bouts with Max Baer and Primo Carnera. He will leave Lakewood, N. J., and its social life for somebody else

TEAMS Out of CONTROL

MEMBERS GO TO NIGHT CLUBS

Berlin, July 30—Inability of officials to control the unwieldy United States Olympic team today found the American athletic forces facing complete demoralization and the possible loss of the team championship.

With Eleanor Holm Jarrett dismissed from the swimming team and two members of the boxing team sailing home because they were "homesick," coaches and athletes admitted that morale is at a very low ebb.

Howell King and Joe Church sailed for America soon after announcement of their being dropped for unspecified reasons. Assistant Coach Fred Caserio said they had become homesick. They made no public protest, but Mrs. Jarrett, who was dropped for drinking and keeping late hours, said

"My suggestion is to send home more officials and fewer athletes We'd get along better."

Dismissal of the boxers was an other evidence of the officials' inability to keep the large squad of athletes under control.

In addition the American delegation's habit of participating in the night life of the German capital has become a matter of scandalized comment among representatives of other nations.

Berlin hot spots are nightly enlivened by team members and officials sporting blue blazers with the shield of the United States over the heart.

Coach Ray Daughters of the women's swimming team struck the keynote for several of his confreres when he said:

"The morale of the team has been shot by the Holm incident. We haven't a ghost of a chance."

Coach Bob Kipphuth was equally pessimistic about the chances of his men's swimming team. He declared the Uncle Sam's representatives are due for a decisive defeat by the Japanese on the base of trial performances

And as for the remaining athletes go, the coaches instead of building up alibis for them are frankly admitting their worry as to America's chances in track and rowing, largely because of the distressing weather.

The latest illness to be reported was that of Stroke Donald R. Hume of the eight-oared Washington crew, who has caught cold and will be replaced in practice by Harold Conbeth. Coach Alvin M. Ulbrickson, in announcing the change said:

"We're lost without Hume."

Bush Named To Oppose Ex-Mates

By JOE CASHMAN

The big thrill of the mid-week doubleheader at the Hive wasn't anything that happened on the field while our battling Bees were dividing honors with Pittsburgh's pesky Pirates

Rather it was the sight for sore eyes of "Buck" Jordan, Johnny Babich and "Mickey" Haslin back in uniform and work out along the sidelines.

None of these important and long absent Bees' cogs is yet ready for regular action, but when a fellow is able to put on his spikes, the day of his return to play isn't far away.

Manager Bill McKechnie expects both Jordan and Babich to be available by Sunday and Haslin may be fit within a week

All of which sends the Bees' first division stock soaring to a new high.

A .500 percentage for the season should surely leave the natives in the money and despite their numerous and costly injuries to date, they have turned in an even-stephen performance over a three-month stretch that should be some sort of a record for consistency. Losing eight of their first 11 starts they have played 84 games since and won and lost 42 of them.

So if they are fortunate enough to have Jordan, Haslin and Babich in shape for the last two months of the campaign, it would seem they should find it a cinch to step on the gas enough to get the few extra victories they need to sport a .500 mark.

So much for the future and now a bit about the present

In the third game of the series with the fourth-place Pirates this p. m., the stream-lined Guy Bush will be sent against his old mates.

And realizing full well that the gaunt Guy is still burning up over his dismissal from Pittsburgh and would give his year's salary to turn back his former pals, Pilot "Pie" Traynor is chasing his ace Cy Blanton, back to the hill with a two-day rest

In other words Somerville Harold isn't going to be made look like a nit-wit by Mr. Bush if he can help it

There's no denying that there's a flock of imposing names in the Corsaits' lineup, but on the field the visitors lacked that something which is the difference between a great club and just another nine.

In the first game, Danny Mac-Fayden had the hostiles eating out of his hand as he breezed to his 11th victory, 4 to 1. In fact, the "Demon" would have had a shutout but for an error and a mental lapse on the part of his supporting cast in the ninth inning

However, he didn't have to worry at that late stage of the tilt, as Traynor hits by Thompson, Comorani and Moore had given him a commanding lead at the expense of Bill Swift.

FIRST GRADE QUALITY—The new Firestone Standard Tire is built of first grade materials, by skilled workmen, and embodies the Firestone patented construction features of Gum-Dipping and two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread.

GUM-DIPPED CORD BODY—Every cotton fibre in every cord in every ply is soaked in liquid rubber. This is the only process known that prevents internal friction and heat, providing greater strength, blowout protection and longer life.

TWO EXTRA LAYERS OF GUM-DIPPED CORDS UNDER THE TREAD—This patented Firestone feature binds the whole tire into one unit of greater strength, cushions road shocks, gives extra protection against punctures.

LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—The new scientifically designed non-skid tread is wider, flatter, with more and tougher rubber on the road, giving long even wear and thousands of extra miles.

LOW PRICES—These low prices are made possible by volume production in the world's most efficient factories.

THE FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE—Every Firestone Standard Tire bears the Firestone name, your guarantee of greater safety, dependability and economy.

FOR TRUCKS AND BUSES

FIRST GRADE MATERIALS AND EXPERT WORKMANSHIP—Into this new Firestone Standard Truck Tire is built long non-skid mileage—blowout protection—and dependable service. Volume production in the world's most efficient factories make possible so much quality at such low prices.

GUM-DIPPED CORD BODY—Gum-Dipping prevents internal friction and heat, the greatest enemy of tire life. This cooler running tire gives extra strength and blowout protection.

TWO EXTRA LAYERS OF GUM-DIPPED CORDS UNDER THE TREAD—Bind the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit. Prevents tread separation. Specially compounded rubber in two outer plies from bead to bead rivets sidewalls securely to cord body preventing blisters and ply separation.

TWIN BEADS WITH CORD REINFORCE—In larger sizes twin beads are used to give tire firm seat on rim—to withstand shocks and side pulls. The beads are tied into the cord body by the special Firestone method of cord reinforce, making the tire one unit of greater strength.

FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE—Assure truck and bus owners greater safety, dependability and economy.

WILSON CALLS ZEMBLA BEST BET

EL PUMA Named in SEVENTH

RIELTHING IN OPENER

By DAVE WILSON
(Selections for fast track)
BEST—ZEMBLA, FOURTH

Suffolk Downs, July 30—Miss B. Bowman's Zembla, a bangup second to Wandrel in last effort should come back and defeat the field down to contest the fourth event of today's eight race card.

Zembla was only beaten a neck by Wandrel in that effort the other day over the local strip. Zembla looms as the safest wagering proposition of the card. C. Phillips will ride.

FIRST RACE
Riellthing, Foxo, Gayette

RIELTHING'S dull effort of only a few days back goes for the well known Mr. Sweeney. In front of that the jersey gelding never was a fast closing second to Jeanne Fetzko. Off that performance, she figures to experience little difficulty in handling this cheap field. FOXO, on recent good form, looms all over the main danger. GAYETTE merits better than a fighting chance on her last.

SECOND RACE
Bud Brown, Hats Off, Cabbegram

BUD BROWN, winner of his last race at Empire, should score over these four formidable rivals. A duplicate of that performance when he easily defeated Hunterdon and Free Again should insure backers. HATS OFF, on recent sprint efforts, figures to offer the real opposition. CABBEGRAM, fresh as a daisy, for the remainder.

THIRD RACE
Melody Maid, Nate Tea, Heartease

MELODY MAID and the capable Johnny Longden shape up as the probable winning combination in this event. Under hustling tactics the horse figures to be sizing up time to nail top honors from NATE TEA. The latter is heaps better than her last dull effort indicates. HEARTEASE may hang on long enough to stave the minor award.

FOURTH RACE
Zembla, Palatine, Memphis Lass

ZEMBLA will have PALATINE to drub for major honors. The latter turned in a highly creditable third to Kurdair last trip. MEMPHIS LASS figures next best on the strength of recent third to Bye Bye Mary and Flag O'War.

FIFTH RACE
Wacoche, Fickle Chance, Boston Brook

WACOCHE, second to Up and Up, needs only to duplicate that recent endeavor to again earn brackets. FICKLE CHANCE, beaten a whisker by the top one for place honors in the above mentioned race, figures close up. BOSTON BROOK, snaps up next best at the weights.

SIXTH RACE
Lost Friend, Ophelia, Thirteen Stars

Just can't pass LOST FRIEND in first line for the winner of this $4,000 sixth. STARS, Sidney Colin's Contention may be furnished by OPHELIA. The Carreul colorbearer is unavailable, but figures real close on top form. THIRTEEN STARS merits attention on her last.

SEVENTH RACE
El Puma, War Pledge, Whipper Cracker

Going to give EL PUMA one more chance. That last effort was heaps better than the dope reveals. WAR PLEDGE, third to Golden Septre, performed as if a trifle shy on racing condition in that most recent endeavor. WHIPPER CRACKER is descending the scale.

EIGHTH RACE
Toney Boy, Bogertin, Millimeter

Stringing along with TONEY BOY in this wide open affair. This plster has worked exceptionally well. BOGERTIN was a red hot favorite in better company last trip, but couldn't outrun a fat man. MILLIMETER was pitted too ambitiously last trip.

$45,000 Gate for Lewis-Gainer Go

Pittsburgh, July 30 (AP)—John Henry Lewis, 25-year-old world's light heavyweight champion, faces one of his severest ring tests tonight in meeting the hard-punching, 26-year-old Al Gainer, of New Haven, Conn., in a 12-round nontitle bout.

Promoters predict the two Negroes will attract a $45,000 crowd, with Lewis' superior boxing ability making him a favorite over his left-hooking, body-punching opponent.

Any Mutt

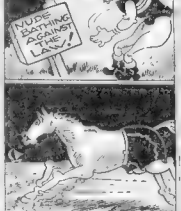
Welcome at Revere Oval

Have you a dog that's free of leg, that loves to chase felines, rabbits or the ragman? If so, you have a wonderful opportunity to test out his speed this afternoon (4 o'clock) at the Wonderland Dog track.

Howard "Shorty" Davis, president of the Old Harbor Kennel Club, is putting on a feature race at the Beach oval for all sorts of mutts that can run. Shorty will furnish all the necessary equipment including the rabbit. Swifty will be scented up to meet the requirements of any pup that cares to run.

The event is an innovation in racing and the bars are dropped to any mutt that will run.

TAP'S TIPS



Popular Johnny Longden is out in front for the $5000 stop watch prize which Managing Director Allan J. Wilson is offering the leading rider of the second half of the current season. Longden won the first half award and if his performance yesterday is a criterion then he is well on his way towards the second. Longden scored a triple Wednesday which brought his total of wins for the second half to 13.

H. W. Young has moved his string from Suffolk to Narragansett. . . . Jockey Lorato Barrientos, the leading riding colony Longo, a bright eyed Italian youth, is can tured either for the mount of Mrs Anthony. B. F. Chapin shipped in his string today from Rockingham. . . .

Gordon Morrow, Rockingham racing official and racing secretary for the four day meeting at Marshfield Fair, August 28, 29, 30 and 31 was a visitor. Morrow reports that there will be a two day card at the Marshfield strip and no purses will be under $200. Pari-mutuels will be installed and Dave Hennessy Mort Mahony's key man, will be in charge . . .

Feature event at Suffolk Downs will be the Elks Purse, the mile and a sixteenth event that brings to the post six members of the upper claiming brigade. A. G. Tarn's Wacoche will be handled in the saddle looms as the favorite Wacoche has been assigned top weight of 117 pounds

Drop Boxers for Taking Souvenirs

(Editor's note: For "taking souvenirs," and not for "homesickness," were Howell King and Joe Church dropped from the American Olympic boxing squad, Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett today says she learned from the secretary of the American Olympic committee. Still keeping in trim, and receiving consolation for her own dismissal in the form flowers from the former Crown Prince of Germany, Mrs. Jarrett predicts keen competition from Japan for the American divers.)

By ELEANOR HOLM JARRETT

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service

Berlin, July 30 (INS)—It's a funny world. Frederick Rubien, secretary of the American Olympic committee, told me today that Howell King and Joe Church were "kicked off the boxing team for taking souvenirs."

Well, just what he meant by "taking souvenirs" is something I don't understand.

I frankly don't know the facts of the case, but I hope the committee has not put through another unjust ruling.

I trained again today and I'm feeling fine. This time the people recognized me while I was practicing in a public pool, and they all asked for autographs.

Invited Back

The owners invited me back, saying I would not have to pay the pool charges. As a matter of fact, this was the first time in my life I ever had to pay for admission to a pool.

The tank was filled with the healthiest, sturdiest children I have ever seen in my life. They were cute. Not speaking English, they crowded around me throwing questions at "Holm." I had a wonderful time.

Incidentally, I received several bids to appear in and vaudeville offers, but I am not accepting any until my husband, Art Jarrett, who is on his way, arrives here.

I want to say I am awfully grateful to those hundreds of people who sent me cables of consolation. It's a nice feeling to know that people believe in you.

Friedrich Wilhelm, the former crown prince—what a thrill! sent me a huge bouquet of flowers and an autographed picture on which he added, "Welcome to Germany!"

Japs Have Divers

Today I went out to the Olympic pool where the Japanese were practicing, and there I found the American coaches, Fred Cady and Clarence Pinkston, quite excited over the diving ability of two Japanese men, Shibba and Hara, and one girl, Miss Osawa.

The coaches told me that in technique and form, as well as grace these Japanese equal the American divers. This is the first time in the history of Olympic diving that the American team has not been assured of any real competition.

On the other hand, Ann Govednick, the Minnesota girl entered in the 200-yard breaststroke event, told me that she has been unable to train in the water since she arrived here from the Manhattan because of ear trouble which developed on the boat and was not cured yet.

All I can say is I wish the swimming and diving teams luck.

COLLYER'S CHOICES

(Copyright, 1936, by Collyer's News Service)

True, the ODOM ENTRY of CHANCER and SIR QUEST, will rule the choice and I might also add there was plenty of room for "action" in Jersey. This should help our prices considerably. Just think what you will get 6-1 and upwards kale back. Yeah, I'll tell the cockeyed world.

In the day's opener "Big Jim" has NO DICE well placed. As a matter of fact, on that last race at Arlington Park, he has a full share of Katy bar the door. WANTA-RUN has shown keen private work, and REX FLAG will have the benefit of JOE YANCEY'S ride. ROYAL RAIMENT another Whitney horse, has a fair chance, point call in the ratings; hence fur ther comment would seem superfluous. Yes, Parents, I understand, has a big bet riding on SUN ARCHER. Nuff sed.

At Arlington

Out at Arlington Park, a particularly well balanced card is offered, with no less than five winners—apparently standing out. PANSY'S PRIDE, the filly was "Hindoo," was the hottest kind of an overnight "tip," though the SOUTHLAND STABLE ENTRY ruled favorite. OLD APPREHEND is again dropped into a snug spot. As on the occasion of his most recent victory his "close" should not be overlooked.

Arlington also has a fine little event in the fifth, and I might add, Kansas City reports plenty of comissions.

At Suffolk

BUD BROOM, a winner last time, is up a peg by the "chiefy" over at Suffolk, and should be the best wagering proposition. Such is the case with MELODY MAID and a few of the deserved ranks of the mutuels in the third. Longden will be in the pilot house, and this combination is of a good horsed ride.

Pittsburg reports oodles of kale for ZEMBLA—in the fourth—and it looks very much as though she dropped into a rather keen spot. Also, the Texas crowd is down to a man on WACOCHE. Uncle Wheel it away —Skippy. More anon.

A. A. U. On Egan Carpet

—By DAVE EGAN—

"My suggestion is to send home more officials and fewer athletes and we'll get along much better."

On my Boy Scout oath, I swear that your envoy did not say it, in exactly those words. Those are the words of Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the lady who was given the bum's rush off the team by Patsy-way Brundage, when he was trying to prove to the world the sportsmanship of Olympic officials.

Dave Egan

It may be that he was simply trying to prove to Herr Hitler that he was a man in command of men, in order that he may enjoy all the benefits of the new Germany, including voting the right ticket all the time.

I think that these A. A. U. officials secretly admire Herr Hitler no little, and possibly they believe that Hitler copied the A. A. U. organization when he formed the Nazi state in what was a comfortable, land.

It may be that Hitler stole some ideas from the A. A. U. and Olympic committee, for they are both despotisms, controlled by a select group.

Guy Named Joe

I know a fellow by the name of Joe who has a sincere interest in amateur athletics. He was an amateur athlete a quarter of a century ago, and his son is an amateur athlete now, and he does not like the manner in which the A. A. U. and the Olympic Committee runs matters.

So this person named Joe says to me, "Dave, you know your way around, tell me how I can have a voice in the running of the amateur athletics in this country, so that they may be run better?"

And all I can say to him is, "Joe, you can search me. There is a racket which has defied the finest minds in the country. I think that it is handed down from father to son, and from son to whelp, and so on."

There will be another beef from these sensitive souls who have made a soft living in amateur athletics by keeping quiet, but I am telling you that it is a closed corporation. The Beef Trust, back in the days of Theodore Roosevelt, was an open-handed, free-spending organization compared to the A. A. U. and the Olympic Committee.

You may be sure, is strictly a piker outfit, which does not know the way to first base.

There is no way for a citizen with an interest in amateur athletics to crash into those tents which are known as the A. A. U. and the Olympic Committee.

The A. A. U. votes are controlled by a flock of charters which have never been used. Each charter entitles the holder to a vote, and when a good, solid citizen stands up at an A. A. U. meeting he is overwhelmed with votes from such amateur organizations as the Piano Tuners A. C., the Hawkins Street Woodyard Literary, Social, Reading and Athletic Club and the Squirrel A. A., all the votes being owned by the same smug group which keeps the charters.

Another Racket

It is a racket which has escaped the hands of those who are known as racketeers, but has fallen into the hands of persons who will stop just as low for a nickel as the lowest racketeer that ever fired a baseball with a shotgun and soaked it with water and then christened it spit.

It may be that Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett is putting the threat on the big-bellied officials who comprise the Olympic committee, and is forcing her way back onto the team.

If could name some major coaches who spent whole nights aboard the Manhattan drinkingboat and not water. That's what Eleanor Holm Jarrett said, and, considering the entire thing in a broad and accommodating manner, I'll have to give Mrs. Jarrett the benefit of my doubts.

I have been reading about the matter in a frank and outspoken manner for some time, and there has been considerable criticism in all the letters.

An outraged reader wrote, "You're slipping, Egan. You should have written it, Heel Brundage."

The eight finest greyhounds at the Taunton dog track, superbly matched in speed, style and endurance, go to the post tonight in the major stake of the year for the Bristol County Kennel Club.

Preparations have been made by General Manager James J. Egan to take care of a capacity crowd tonight at the big, comfortable plant, on the Taunton-Providence pike and Racing Secretary Clint Dewhurst has set out a card of supporting events notable for closely-matched fields of gallopers.

To the owner of the winning dog, the Bristol County Kennel Club will present the gold collar, emblematic of the speed championship of Taunton. Mrs. Drury L. Sheraton, secretary of the Bristol County Kennel Club and noted breeder of show dogs, will make the formal presentation from the judges' stand.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
TIGER DONNA, CHIEF'S MUTT, TIGER TONE

Pp	Name	Wgts.	Odds
6	Mrs. Andrew	66	5-1
4	Chief's Mutt	66	3-2
5	Tiger Tone	66	3-1
2	Rustling Rover	58	6-1
3	Tiger Donna	58	6-1
1	Jack Worth	58	8-1
7	Ann Grant	58	12-1
8	Tiger Lily	58	20-1

TIGER DONNA, due to repeat win or place, will have a lot to say about it. CHIEF'S MUTT has been challenging TIGER TONE and will have a lot to say, also.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY
WEST PORT, ESEAU, PLANTER

2	Penny Boy	65	3-1
3	Wonder Port	65	5-1
1	Sandy Boy	65	6-1
6	Easy Boy	65	8-1
4	Ann Worth	58	10-1
5	Wee Wink	58	6-1
7	Jack Worth	58	8-1

WEST PORT, knocking at the door in recent outings, should be right in the money. ESEAU BOY, a newcomer to the track, was beaten for the best in last by half a length in his trial. PENNY BOY is also fast.

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
LADY OF THE EVENING, ARMED

2	Lady of the Evening	67	2-1
1	Half Rock	67	8-1
3	Chance Flight	67	8-1
5	Jilljack	61	10-1
4	Armed Lady	56	5-1
8	Kashmir Dusk	58	15-1
6	Peggy	56	8-1
7	Columbia River	58	4-1

LADY OF THE EVENING needs little race to bring her up to peak form, can make it. ARMED LADY will be the challenger in this company. COLUMBIA RIVER, with short end, is easy choice.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
PRINCE KING, DICKIE, WAVEY ME

6	Lawsey Me	58½	4-1
5	Prince King	58	6-1
1	Dotty Boll	61	8-1
4	Dickie	58	6-1
3	Little Joe Annie	52	6-1
2	Peck	52	10-1
7	Irish Jack	61	5-1
8	Wavey Me	58	6-1

PRINCE KING has been too close, better-than-even money favorite in his last two outings. DICKIE was pooh-pooh and should collect. LAWSEY ME, tough, is a MAYBE. All can get up for the rest.

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
SPEED'S FANCY, DUKE MALONE, RISKMENDER

3	Speed's Fancy	68	2-1
4	Duke Malone	68	3-1
8	Gary's Pond	58	10-1
5	Penny Angel	63	8-1
6	Duke Malone	68	3-1
1	Ann Flash	58	6-1
7	Flair Breeze	58	6-1
2	Riskmender	58	4-1

SPEED'S FANCY made it too in last, in spite of wrong trouble. DUKE MALONE has been carrying a challenge for some time and should be right. RISKMENDER will be the threat here.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
ANY DISTANCE, SUSAN ANDREW, DUROC'S KNIGHT

3	Duroc's Knight	68	6-1
4	Rose Bud	68	6-1
2	Ann Bayard	68	8-1
1	Susan Andrew	61	2-1
5	Texas Andrew	61	3-1
6	Glamorous Girl	56	8-1

DUROC'S KNIGHT is reaching best form again, should collect if as I especially fancy SUSAN ANDREW, who has been good enough for small purses.

SEVENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
FLYING ALLEY, KATIE'S WAY, TOWN TAVERN

6	Still in Charge	63	5-1
4	Bragg	63	3-1
3	Kashmir Supreme	54	8-1
5	Town Tavern	67	6-1
7	School Gone	64	10-1
8	Orchard Girl	54	12-1
2	Town Tavern	67	4-1
1	Flying Alley	67	3-1

FLYING ALLEY another good knocker, showed plenty fast stuff in his last and bore ahead. KATIE'S WAY will be right here. Town Tavern, Bragg and TOWN TAVERN will be in the fight.

EIGHTH RACE—FUTURITY
SELF RELIANCE, MY DADDY, WOOD-BURY

8	Self Reliance	58	2-1
4	Woodbury	58	3-1
6	My Dagger	68	10-1
5	My Daddy	68	3-1
3	Jack Ace Run	61	8-1
2	Ann Flash	61	8-1
1	My Reward	71	6-1
7	Quiet Boy	61	8-1

SELF RELIANCE did well on heavy track in last outing, is very much entitled to win again. MY DADDY, gradually improving, is the threat to them as is WOODBURY. Jack Ace Run is also in the picture.

NINTH RACE—5-16 MILE
(Gold Collar Championship)
PILGRIM, WAGTAIL, MAJOR JAMES-TOWN

1	Wagtail	57½	3-1
2	Sir Major	63	10-1
3	Pilgrim	66	2-1

4	Parade	66	12-1
5	Jack Tinsley	63½	8-1
6	Broadway Boy	57	6-1
7	Edward	63	8-1
8	Major Jamestown	63½	4-1

PILGRIM, Kendall winner at Utica, will take everything if his form was true Tuesday. WAGTAIL has the big flash speed needed in this crowd; should get up next. MAJOR JAMESTOWN, wrong-footed may justify recent form and catch the rest.

TENTH RACE—FUTURITY
LOST NOTE, PANSY WALKER, FANSY WALKER

3	Lost Note	58½ 3-1
5	Jimmy Hanks	58 4-1
4	Real Estate	63½ 6-1
7	Another Bing	57 8-1
6	Caddy Bush	61½ 12-1
8	Young Sonny	58 5-1
1	Ruby Leonard	58 10-1
2	Fansy Walker	58 4-1

LOST NOTE, bumped out in last, looked good in school, should come up here tonight. YOUNG SONNY is best of rest for next spot. FANSY WALKER, a challenger every time out, can have the rest.

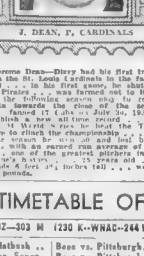
"Bullet Boy Baker, University of Southern California grid immortal, who scored twice against Penn State in the 1922 Pasadena Rose Bowl game, today was signed as assistant coach and trainer of the Boston Redskins professional football team.

Wes Carroll, six-foot, three inch 215-pound guard and tackle from the University of Nevada, was also signed to play with the Redskins.

Sport Stamp



Jerome Dean—Dizzy had his first tryout with the St. Louis Cardinals in the fall of 1930, and in his first game, he shut out the Pirates . . . was farmed out to Houston, and the following year came back to win again. MY DADDY, gradually improving, is the threat to them as is WOODBURY. Jack Ace Run is also in the picture.

OLYMPIC Board Ousts JAHNCKE

BRUNDAGE LAUDED

Brundage's name was presented to the International body by William May Garland of Los Angeles, a member of the committee, who lauded the career of the Chicagoan both as an athlete and leader.

The former all-round champion and two-time Olympian has been a dominant figure in amateur sport for the past decade. Brundage also was president of the American committee for the 1932 Olympic games held at Los Angeles.

He was elected to the A. U. S. presidency at Detroit, December 8 at the annual meeting where he led a successful fight against an attempt to keep the United States out of the Olympic games.

The other American membership on the committee, formerly held by the late Bridgeford Hall, Charles A. Sherrill of New York, was not filled at today's meeting. The body nominated for this post are Gustavus T. Kirby, New York lawyer and treasurer of the American Olympic committee, and Judge Murray Hulbert of New York, a former president of the A. A. U.

NO FORMAL RESIGNATION

Jahncke did not communicate his resignation formally to the international committee, but there was no doubt he intended that his opposition to holding the Olympic games here meant his withdrawal from any connection with the committee.

Officially the only statement issued from the meeting today with reference to Jahncke was that he has been "eliminated as a membership for failure to attend two meetings."

The committee decided to defer election of Sherrill's successor out of deference to the memory of the American who served 14 years on the committee.

FIVE NEW MEMBERS

Altogether five new members were elected including representatives from countries admitted into the I. O. C. for the first time. The Philippines and Liechtenstein were the newcomers bringing the total membership to 68. Applications from Malta and Jamaica were tabled.

Individuals elected included Jorge Vargas of the Philippines; Prince Franz Josef of Liechtenstein; Jigoro Tokugawa of Japan; Jokim Buhk of Estonia. Tokugawa and Buhk, like Brundage, were replacements.

The official withdrawal of England's bid for the 1940 games was made today by Lord Aberdare of Britain, however, reserved a claim for the games eight years hence.

Japan's representative publicly presented her offer to conduct the 1940 games. Finland, also bidding to hold the next meet at Helsingfors, will present her case this afternoon.

Yesterday's Stars

By the Associated Press

Burgess Whitehead, Giants—His homer, double and two singles led way to 7-3 win over Cubs.

Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio, Yanks—Collected hits, including Gehrig's 32d homer, driving in seven runs against Tigers.

Rudy Hulswitt, Dodgers, and Buck Medwick, Cardinals—Form er's two triples and single batted in Ott's run in ninth gave Giants 6-5 opener; Medwick belted two homers in nightcap.

Mule Haas, White Sox—Had three hits in win over Athletics.

Danny MacFayden, Bees, and Paul Waner, Pirates—Former's pitching and Waner's 200th hit gave Bees 4-3 decision in first game; latter's triple set off winning rally in nightcap.

Barry Rated Best At Revere Oval

By SAM COHEN

BEST BET—BARRY, Fifth Race

Barry, H. E., Alderson's fast-breaking greyhound, who always runs better from an inside position, figures to romp home in the fifth at Wonderland Park tonight as the best bet on the card.

Inside position should also settle the eighth race feature, as Ben Officer in the one slot is strictly the dog to beat.

FIRST RACE—5-16 MILE
WINGED BULLET, HOPING GYPSY, MORE CARKEET

3	Winged Bullet	65	4-1
8	Roving Gypsy	60	Jack Driver 6-1
1	Moby Sheets	64	Andy Mahan 8-1
6	Perfect Harmony	52	Dennis Allen 6-1
4	Silver Hand	54	Mrs. H. Stone 8-1
7	Gins Canoma	61	Mrs. H. Stone 8-1
5	Flying Tell	53	Mrs. H. Stone 10-1
2	Polly Survivor	58	E. McGinnis 20-1

WINGED BULLET, acquired from John J. Keenan's kennel, had shown much early improvement lately and seems ready for a winning effort. ROVING GYPSY was off slowly last time, made up a great deal of ground. Should be a threat if it can break on top. MOBY SHEETS, oftentimes a disappointment, seems to be moving better lately and is no better than third. PERFECT HARMONY is mild possibility.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY
LITTLE SIR WM., LUCKY JIMMIE W

8	Little Sham	66	W. Worthington 4-1
1	Lucky Jim	63	Jess Brooks 6-1
2	Jimmie W	63	R. F. Randle 8-1
3	Mister Ford	63	Dennis Allen 8-1
4	Mister Frank	63	H. Bridgeford 8-1
5	Sir Bill	63	R. Randle 8-1
6	Who's Andrew	60	R. D. Carroll 8-1
7	Mobil Oil	58	Jess Brooks 8-1

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
BRAVE SHOW, HAPPY TRAFFIC, OAKLAND MARINER

3	Brave Show	63	L. E. Thompson 6-1
8	Happy Traffic	58	R. Randle 6-1
7	Oakland Harbor	60	John Allen 8-1
1	Ambitionless	72	R. Randle 8-1
2	Norma Lee M	55	S. G. Allen 7-1
4	Alva B	54	Jess Brooks 8-1
5	Strong Position	61	W. McDonough 8-1
6	Vaughan's Lass	66	W. McDonough 10-1

BRAVE SHOW, lately bumped last time, should be the one to beat. If 4½ to run up to previous races. Dog was improved rapidly until in trouble at first corner Tuesday and if not hurt then, can come into a good race. HAPPY TRAFFIC is also a strong contender, while OAKLAND HARBOR has done very well against this company. AMBITIONLESS, if he still remembers how, is also a threat.

FOURTH RACE—5-16 MILE
RAWDON'S TRAFFIC, FINAL JACK, GRACE ANN

8	Rawdon's Traffic	66	M. Worthington 4-1
6	Final Jack	66	Jess Brooks 6-1
5	Grace Ann	57	William Baker 8-1
1	Sonny Boy	66	William Baker 8-1
7	Miss L. Meyers	60	William Jensen 8-1
3	Sonny Walker	60	Silverman 10-1
2	Echo Dawn	49	Mrs. H. Stone 8-1
4	Sand Girl	57	R. F. Neal 10-1

RAWDON'S TRAFFIC, bumped previous time, earns a light edge on FINAL JACK that embraces many pups that have never been clocked. Latter, however, has been early speed several times, but is inclined to tire. May stick it out another time. FINAL JACK not so bad as his recent form indicates. GRACE ANN is also in the hole. GRACE ANN a possibility. Others have shown little, likely to slip in figure.

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
BARRY, MILDER'S BAR, PYRAMID

3	Barry	66	H. E. Alderson 4-1
2	Milder's Bar	61	W. C. Allen 6-1
5	Sandy Angel	61	Dennis Allen 6-1
1	My Betty	66	K. McGinnis 8-1
4	Miss Jones	61	Jack Driver 8-1
6	Frisky Lad	66	John Allen 8-1
7	Sally Ann	61	Mrs. H. Holmes 8-1
8	Skyline Mahout	66	Paul Jensen 10-1

BARRY has been a consistent performer Tuesday, but will have previous race, by far, his toughest assignment. Will have to catch here. SILVER'S BAR also was in trouble last time, but should be the main contender if able to avoid trouble on first turn. PYRAMID, a fast one, is also a possibility. As we go below MY BETTY and SALLY ANN can't be overlooked.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
DIGHTON, JANET'S GIFT, STORM CLOUD

1	Dighton	66	D. Callaghan 5-1
6	Janet's Gift	66	R. F. Neal 6-1
8	Storm Cloud	66	Mel Mosier 8-1
5	Kitty Shoe	60	E. Alderson 8-1
3	Sonntag Breeze	60	G. Lippold, Jr. 6-1
4	Rosina	57	Jess Brooks 8-1
2	Hawke's Flash	66	William Baker 8-1
7	Gang's Misery	66	Dennis Allen 8-1

DIGHTON would rate a chance in this company if only feel on him. Has come on to beat from the one hole this season and is picked to do so here. JANET'S GIFT, improving, is also a threat. STORM CLOUD, a newcomer, has been working well and will better that effort considerably if not in top form. KITTY SHOE, KOSINA and GANG'S MISERY are also in the picture.

SEVENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
GREEN'S, RUNNER'S DAUGHTER, MATCHLESS OFFICER

8	Greenlee	66	Dennis Allen 4-1
3	Mooney's Pride	71	L. W. Randall 8-1
4	Runner's Daughter	65	Jack Driver 8-1
5	Golden Skies	53	J. A. Austin 8-1
1	Matchless Officer	66	R. F. Neal 8-1
7	Kass City Kitty	58	Mrs. Faber 8-1
6	Sally Ann	61	Mrs. H. Holmes 8-1
2	Pepper Rial	66	Sherwood Ray 10-1

EIGHTH RACE—5-16 MILE
BEN OFFICER, SENATOR SIRACUSA, TOUCHDOWN

3	Ben Officer	66	L. W. Randall 4-1
6	Senator Siracusa	66	Jess Brooks 6-1
2	Touchdown	63	Dennis Allen 6-1
7	Madeline's Boy	63	R. F. Neal 8-1
4	Chink	53	H. E. Alderson 7-1
5	Captain Hall	66	Mel Mosier, Jr. 8-1
8	Captain Sally	60	J. D. Hall 8-1
1	Bill Bowers	66	J. A. Austin 10-1

BEN OFFICER has beaten the company of this race easily on several occasions and can get it done again take it all. SENATOR SIRACUSA, another excellent dog from the inside, should force the pace all the way. TOUCHDOWN, a fast one, may be against those CHINK speedy sometimes.

NINTH RACE—5-16 MILE
CONNIE MACK, IRON MAN, MACRAG

4	Connie Mack	63	L. E. Thompson 4-1
2	Iron Man	60	K. Ort 6-1
1	Macrag	60	D. Callaghan 8-1
3	Just Mac	60	Crescent Kennel 8-1
5	Fatima's Choice	60	Jack Driver 8-1
6	Danny Grey	65	J. W. Ewalt 8-1
7	Red Rob	65	J. A. Austin 8-1
8	Anna Breese	62	J. W. Ewalt 10-1

CONNIE MACK, a fast one in the early lengths off the winner last time, might be the pup to beat. IRON MAN is a new company dog has been improving steadily and is a threat. MACRAG, good for his last three races. IRON MAN still has to prove he can stay the distance. Others, all dogs, but a recent efforts give him no chance. JUST MAC and ANNA BREESE possible long shot winners.

TENTH RACE—5-16 MILE
GLENFIELD, LIKE LADDIE, EMPIRE STATE

2	Glenfield	65	D. Callaghan 5-1
3	Like Laddie	65	Jack Driver 6-1
1	Empire State	63	Wm. Fielding 8-1
4	Ann	58	Crescent Kennel 8-1
5	Twinkle	57	W. Worthington 7-1
7	Miss Jim Bolt	61	W. Worthington 8-1
6	Peggy Breese	57	S. G. Allen 8-1
8	Flying Arrow	63	John Allen 10-1

GLENFIELD, a fast one when he wants to, has looked best here but race loomed against him. LIKE LADDIE, a newcomer, entered here with fast GLENFIELD and EMPIRE STATE were over last time and was capable of a good one but in the race he was not run well enough at some time to figure.

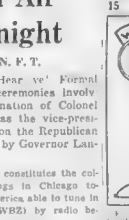
Knox Acceptance On Air Tonight

By N. F. T.

Hear ye, Hear ye! Formal notification ceremonies involving the nomination of Colonel Frank Knox as the vice-presidential mate on the Republican ticket headed by Governor Landon.

All of which constitutes the colorful big doings in Chicago tonight, with America able to tune in (WNAC and WBZ) by radio between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Introduction at the microphone will be by Senator Stiwer of Oregon, the Republican keynoter, whereupon the noted newspaper pub lisher will assume his platform place to deliver the acceptance address. Various orations are scheduled at the spacious Chicago Stadium with extensive radio facilities made ready to convey what takes place to the armchair audience from coast to coast.



N. F. T.

THIS AND THAT—THAT AIR

Bing Crosby brings Dolores Costello Barrymore to his "Music Hall" cast (WEEI) at 10 o'clock this evening.

Those low floating notes perfected by Wayne King and lending such charm to his music, came into being by necessity. Wayne learned his sax stuff while living at a YMCA and practiced by turning his hook upside down in a pillow thereby duly subduing the sound. It didn't annoy anyone and at the same time pleased him. He continued playing that way and has subsequently caused the saxophone music he makes to be actually brushed. Wise young Wayne!

MOVE TO MEDFORD

There's to be a hearing before the Aldermanic body in Medford Hall on Monday night for construction of a $100,000 broadcasting plant on the Mystic river marshes and to embrace the transmitting towers for WEEI when that station switches from Edison Electric Illuminating Company operation to the supervision of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Edison interests will continue the WEEI operating and have applied for the Medford grant although active direction and network features will be through Columbia channels after mid-October. Meaning also that WNAC waves will carry the opposition NBC-ish material now put out over the WEEI 590 kilocycles.

Rudy Vallee, conductor of the popular Thursday night variety hour bearing his name, quietly celebrated his 35th birthday day before yesterday at his lodge in Maine. Vallee believes that the best way to enjoy a birthday is to get as far away as possible from the racket of the big city.

Best Bets Tomorrow

9:05 a. m.—WBZ—The Breakfast Club, Orchestra and Soloists.

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Pull those old school books out of the attic, boys and girls, and do your best to look intellectual, because we've got a college professor's wife as guest of honor today, and the class in Applied Adventure is about to begin.

There goes the school bell. We're ready to go. I'm turning the rostrum over to MRS. J. H. COLVIN of 42 Wendell street, Cambridge, and the lesson gets under way with an illustration of how to get yourself all mixed up in an adventure. The best way Mrs. Colvin knows, she says, is to be a little girl just six years old, go fishing with your dad, and then wander away from him.

That very thing happened in the spring of 1920 to little six year-old Mary Fortney. Mary Fortney, I ought to explain, was Mrs. Colvin's name before she married. It happened in Texas, because that's Mary's home state. Her dad was a great one for going fishing and hunting. At times he'd take his whole family with him on these trips.

That particular trip in the spring of 1920 was like a big picnic. Mary's dad had taken her, her mother, her brother and her sister, and they had gone, along with several other families, to a place called the Old Iron Bridge, about 20 miles west of the city of Beaumont.

They went in cars equipped to camp for a few days, and they had selected the Old Iron Bridge neighborhood, because it was near one of the best camping grounds in the whole region—a high secure spot with large oak and elm trees for shade, a good spring and, most important of all, plenty of good places to fish

But there were other things in that neighborhood besides good fishing and good camping grounds. Not far off was a place known as Palmetta Thicket, and Mary's description of it isn't very appealing.

Says she: "It is an immense stretch of low, swampy land. In the spring it is full of snakes of all kinds, and especially full of water moccasins which, in that part of the country at least, grow to be six and seven feet long and sometimes as much as eight inches in circumference. With their mouths open they look almost big enough to swallow a human, and they are as much dreaded as the local rattlesnakes."

A pretty bad looking piece of real estate, boys and girls, and it's the villain of our story. After the Fortneys and their neighbors had arrived at the camping grounds and the tents had been put up, Mary's dad started out to catch fish for lunch. Mary and her brother went with him. Mary stood around and watched while dad and brother fished, but it wasn't long before she got tired of just standing around watching. She told her brother she was going back to the camp and he pointed out the trail she was to follow

Mary walked along that trail until it seemed as if she had gone twice as far as the original distance back to camp. But still there was no camp in sight. If she had been a little older she might have turned back. But she was only six, and to her little mind it seemed that to keep on going was the proper thing to do. So she toddled on for hours, getting more frightened with every step she took.

Every time she turned a corner in the trail she hoped to see the camp ahead of her. But that camp wasn't around any of the corners. At length she came to a place where the trail branched off. She took one of the branches and suddenly found herself in low, swampy ground. SHE HAD STUMBLED INTO THE DREADED PALMETTA THICKET!

"I began to scream and cry for daddy," she says, "but all I could hear was the echo of my voice. Blinded by tears, I stumbled along a narrow trail until, suddenly, I stopped, almost numb with terror.

"LYING ACROSS THE PATH WAS A HUGE MOCCASIN, TWICE AS LONG AS I, AND WITH A MOUTH AS LARGE AS MY HEAD.

"As soon as I could move, I backed up and started running—I didn't know where—fearing to look back—knowing the snake was after me.

"I HADN'T GONE MORE THAN A FEW YARDS WHEN I RAN INTO A WHOLE FAMILY OF SNAKES THAT HAD COME ONTO THE TRAIL, CUTTING OFF MY RETREAT."

Mary doesn't know how she got past those snakes. Maybe the creatures sensed her were harmless, for they didn't seem to bother her. But when her trail came back to her again she had lost the trail, was roaming around in that reptile infested swamp totally lost.

The next two hours were ones of terrible anguish. She wandered about aimlessly, in a reptile infested swamp beset by a score of dangers. Every place she trod might be quicksand. Snakes—she saw dozens of them! There was a wildcat in the thicket. Mary knew, because the Boy Scouts were trying to catch it. And to make matters worse, it would soon be night. It was eleven o'clock in the morning when she had left her dad. Now it was almost six.

But suddenly, in the distance, she heard a voice—her dad's voice calling to her. Mary answered, and the voice came closer. There were other voices shouting in the thicket, too, and in a few minutes an old colored wood gatherer found her and took her to her dad. She was five miles away from the camp, had been gone several hours, and had all the people in the neighborhood searching for her before she was found.

"And ever since then," says Mary, "I've always stuck to camp."

Cohasset Horse Set Busy With Plans for Annual Show

By BETTY ALDEN

ONLY YESTERDAY we observed that Cohasset was making the most of the next few days before everyone's interest swings toward the North Shore and regatta week at Marblehead . . .

Mrs. William C. Cox is certainly doing her share toward making the week an active one . . . In fact her home, The Oaks, on the edge of the harbor, was the headquarters of social activity last evening and all day today . . .

MARJORIE KIMPTON

Last night, all the members of the various committees preparing for the annual Cohasset Horse Show, gathered round the Cox's dining room table to smooth out all the hitches in the plans and put the finishing touches on arrangements for seating, parking and distributing tickets . . . The show is to be held on August 13, 14 and 15 at the show ring on Mrs. Hugh Bancroft's estate, Deer Hill . . .

Some of the junior committee for the show include Freddie Goode, Jr., and Jane Bancroft, the chairmen . . . also Arthur Blake, Barbara Bremer, Martha Chapin and her pal, Katie Johnson . . . Johnny Goode, who is a very skilled rider . . . Mrs. Francis Gleason and her sister, Frannie McElwain . . . Marjorie and Alison Kimpton . . . Crocker Wight, Helen Davidson, Freddie White and Dorothy Storer . . .

Practically all the horse lovers along the South Shore have checked this event as one of the summer's most outstanding and a great deal of entertaining is being planned in honor of visiting exhibitors and judges . . .

Some of those who have already reserved boxes are Mrs. Winthrop Adams and Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., who will share one together . . . Mrs. Paul Bird and Mrs. Bradford Hardon have followed suit and Mrs. Thorndike Whittemore and Mrs. James F. Kimball of Hingham will enjoy the proceedings from the same box . . .

Still others in the ringside boxes will be Mrs. J. F. Kemble, Mrs. E. Fred Cullen, Mrs. M. W. Robertson and Mrs. T. Fred Stoddard and Mrs. Ralph Menard whose names will be coupled on the outside of one box . . .

Competition will be keen in the ladies' harness pony classes for exhibitors will be eager to win the new challenge cup awarded for this class by Mrs. Paul Moore of Covent, N. J., and Prides Crossing . . .

Lecture and Concert on Program

MR. AND MRS. COX are killing two birds with one stone today, by having a lecture for the benefit of the Boston Y. W. C. A., in the morning, and a concert by the Hampton Quartet in the evening . . . Once all the chairs are set up for the morning affair it is a simple matter to switch on dim rosy lights, change a bouquet here and there, and have their music room all in readiness for the evening concert . . .

For the many people who will attend both affairs the day will be far from monotonous . . . In the morning Edmund Lester Pearson, a well-known author of detective stories and magazine articles, will be the speaker and has chosen for his subject, "Murder Will Out" . . .

In the evening at 8:45, the Negro singers from Hampton Institute will give a full program of the spirituals for which they have become so famous, and they will also illustrate and explain the work done at Hampton Institute in Virginia, a school for colored men and women . . . they will also give a special demonstration showing how they make wooden furniture . . .

• • •

Joins Summer Colony at Yarmouthport

MRS. CHARLES MERRIAM is a welcome addition to the summer colony down in Yarmouthport where she is occupying the cottage of Mrs. George R. Agassiz . . . Mrs. Merriam is the mother of Mrs. John Wheelwright of Marlborough street, whose son, Merriam Wheelwright, is enjoying the summer sports down on the Cape, where he is the guest of his grandmother . . .

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Fay are making a midsummer visit with the Henry Paysons at Hyannisport . . .

• • •

Francis Bradley headed south from Dark Harbor last week end to join the Oxford Group's week end house party at Centerville . . . his wife, Katharine Howe Bradley and her two youngsters stayed with her parents, the Dudley Howes, at Dark Harbor during his absence . . .

• • •

Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., who is summering with her family at Beverly Farms, packed her bag a few days ago and went off to visit her brother, Francis W. Fabyan, Jr., at Buzzards Bay . . . As soon as she returns her time and thought will be pretty much occupied with preparations for the wedding of her sister-in-law, Dorothea Frothingham, which will be one of the outstanding social events of the early autumn along the shore . . .

Dorothea will become the bride of David O. Bangs on September 12, and evidently she will be a handy little bride to have around the house should reverses ever befall her well to do husband-to-be . . . For this summer up in Bar Harbor, where she is staying with her mother, Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, she has turned her hand to conducting classes in contract and duplicate bridge, and is actually putting into practice what every girl would like to do when she is contemplating buying her trousseau . . . No matter how large or small one's budget, there are always so many extra things a girl would like to have that she likes to earn a little extra pin money to buy them for herself . . .

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

—TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS! TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS

All Junior Birdmen and Birdwomen of the Boston American wing should make plans now to attend the annual national model plane air races to decide the United States outdoor title for 1936 which will be held at Franklin Field, Blue Hill and Talbot avenues all day next Tuesday.

Seventeen wing champions, victors in local elimination tournaments several weeks ago in all the cities in which Hearst newspapers are published, will compete on that day for the national championship, the William Randolph Hearst trophy, a first prize of $250 cash and a transcontinental air trip to Los Angeles.

The 17, including the New England champion, Frank A. Barrett, Jr., of Brighton, represent the best model plane builders and fliers in the country. They are sure to present a keen spirited battle in each of the three events making up the day's classic.

The events are gliders, hand-launched stick models and R. O. G. cabin models built to the same specifications laid down in the manuals for the wing air races. Two hours will be devoted to timing in each event with the longest flights to be the winning flights.

Gordon Agur

This is the first time Boston has been chosen as the site of the national tournament and local Birdmen won't have another opportunity to see the classic for several years since all of the 17 cities are being chosen in turn.

Members of the wing are not only urged to see this important and spectacular model plane derby, but are invited to bring their parents, relatives and friends.

The champions will arrive in Boston this coming Sunday evening and will establish headquarters at Hotel Statler, ready to follow an elaborate program of activities.

Early Monday morning they will receive the city's greetings from acting Mayor John I. Fitzgerald at City Hall. Then they will drive to Boston Municipal Airport, where they will be welcomed by Captain Albert E. Edson, superintendent. Air maneuvers, inspection of hangars and flights in Stinsons operated by the John H. Shobes Air Lines and the Douglas flagship of the American Air Lines will precede luncheon.

On Monday afternoon the champions will visit the Charlestown Navy Yard, Bunker Hill Monument and M. I. T. aero laboratories. The next three days will be taken up with the contest, sightseeing tours, luncheons, a cruise to Nantasket Beach and a banquet.

The wing champions will include Gordon Agur, winner of the outdoor elimination meet of the San Francisco wing.

Keen Fight In Newport

This is the open season for all sorts of balloting and straw votes, so everyone is doubly interested in the competition of comeliness now being held in Newport, R. I., by the Newport Hospital Fair committee.

Miss Virginia Middleton French of Dedham and New York, who had been leading the contest for the title of prettiest girl since the contest began, has dropped to second place. Miss Jane Pope is now leading the field with almost 2000 votes. Miss Adelaide Whitehouse is third, closely followed by Miss Consuelo Vilis and Miss Lucy Saunders.

Nathanial P. Hill has a long lead on the rest of the candidates for the title of "handsomest man," William Fitzhugh Whitehouse is second, Walter Gurnee Dyer, third, and Beverly Bogart, fourth. G. Huntington Hartford, 2d, has the most votes for "most athletic man." In a close race for the distinction of being dubbed "the best dressed man," J. Benedict Cattell, Jr., is edging out Mayor Henry S. Wheeler.

The contest has five more days to run, and unless unforseen upsets occur Mrs. C. Mathews Dick will be the "best dressed" woman and Miss Evelyn Bostel will be named the "most vivacious" girl. A small fee is charged for each ballot and the proceeds will benefit the Newport Hospital.

Yacht Club to Conduct Fair

TSK! TSK! Scituate Yacht Club's gone land-lubberish. The club's helping the town to celebrate its tercentenary and country yokels, gingham-clad maids and pet shows are replacing skippers and nautical talk on Saturday when the club will be converted into a typical midway of a county fair.

The only event on the whole program which savors of anything salty is the parade of bathing beauties in the mid-afternoon. And a glamorous feature it's going to be with attractive young colonists emulating Harlow, Crawford and other Hollywood stars.

Frances Whoriskey, blonde daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John J. Whoriskey of Cambridge and Scituate, heads the list of mannequins. Others parading smart bathing togs will be Portia Ives, Sarah Smith, Louise Keane, Inez Thompson, Ann Simpson, Mary and Julia Casey, Rose O'Neill, Mary Ober, Barbara Sait and Patty Paulson.

Pet Show

The fun starts the morning sounds the starting gun of the benefit. Mary and Rita Faunce are in charge of the entries. Many and varied are the pets already listed. Goldfish will be displayed, turtles will be shown, plus the usual cats and dogs. Highlight of the collection is the Harlem quintuplets, a batch of black kittens, to be shown by Mrs. Clare Mayo.

Colorful cabanas skirting the pool are to be converted into shops and bargain tables where unique bridge prizes and early Christmas gifts may be purchased by the wary shopper.

Tweeds and knitted goods will be sold by Helen Porter and Constance Bercomis and Mrs. Clare Mayo will lure buyers with her display of hand-blocked linen scarfs, handbags, accessories and sportswear.

Others doing sale duty at the booths will be Portia Ives who will be aided by a coterie of young setters in selling cake and ice cream, Helen Fitzpatrick will dispense canned goods and varicolored balloons will be sold by Ann Casey.

Gala Climax

Senora Inez Haynes Irwin will probe for the future in the role of Madame Fortune Teller.

Louisa Beane and Will Irwin are to be the day's master and mistress of ceremonies. They hold forth throughout fete and will be in prime condition for the gala climax of the day, a dinner dance in the evening.

As the bright orange flier says "Hear Ye, Hear Ye. Don't miss the fair! Everybody Welcome. Bring grandma—Buy her a lollypop. Bring grandpop—Buy him a balloon."

See you there.

Dinner Will Conclude Cruise

The gangplank's on its way up . . . It's time to make reservations in the cruise the women's division of the Democratic State Committee is having on Saturday.

The ship leaves Rowe's Wharf at 10:30 in the morning, and there will be something doing all day long until the ship docks at Pemberton for dinner and a political get-together. This part of the program is under the direction of Mrs. Frank De Celles and Mrs. Margaret O'Riordan will serve as toastmistress.

General chairman of the day is Mrs. Walter McCarthy and a score of women active in political affairs are serving as honorary chairmen. They are Mary Curley Donnelly, Mrs. Joseph L. Hurley, Mrs. Charles F. Hurley, Mrs. Thomas F. Buckley and Marie Dever.

Others actively interested in the outcome of the affair are Mrs. Susan Bradley Donovan of East Boston, Katherine Greene of Charlestown and Mrs. Joseph Lagone, Jr., of Boston.

North Shore committee members will be well represented at this get-together. They are Mrs. Felix Carr of Peabody, Mrs. Mary Bowne of Lynnfield and Mrs. Peter Griffin of Salem.

Reservations have been made by Mrs. Peter Collins, Marie Keenan, Elizabeth Kelleher, Mrs. David Posner, Mrs. John H. Boyle, Mrs. Frederick Dorsn, Mrs. Charles Cleary, Mrs. John S. Graham, Mrs. Theresa McDermott and Mrs. Matilda Deignan of Lowell.

Gov. Landon's Pledge To Fair Campaign

GOVERNOR ALFRED M. LANDON will present his Presidential candidacy to the people of the United States without appeal to class or prejudice.

In his Presidential acceptance speech, Mr. Landon said:

"I intend to approach the issues fairly, as I see them, without rancor or passion. If we are to go forward permanently, it must be with a united nation—not with a people torn by appeals to prejudice and divided by class feeling."

There is vital need for this PLEDGE OF TOLERANCE, as the American nation enters upon the current Presidential campaign.

America was perhaps the first great nation of the earth to assure unto all men freedom of thought, equality of opportunity and security of worship without discrimination against race or creed.

America remains the ONLY NATION in which these essential human rights are PRESERVED to all its people.

Our great aim must be the CONTINUED PRESERVATION of these liberties. We cannot jeopardize them, by permitting political exploitation of prejudice and class feeling.

CLASS CONFLICT is the rock upon which a FREE AMERICA WILL POUND ITSELF TO PIECES, if its people ever turn their backs upon the tolerant principles which first inspired the building of this nation upon the American continent.

Governor Landon has DEDICATED HIMSELF to the perpetuation of a TOLERANT AMERICA. His devotion to American principles hangs like a sword of Damocles over the hideous head of intolerance wherever and whenever it is raised in America.

Mr. Landon recognizes the natural diversion of opinions which must attend a political campaign. It shall be his purpose to present a national program he conceives to be essential to the welfare of the people.

MR. LANDON believes the people of America have not only the inalienable right, but also the NECESSARY INTELLIGENCE, to choose the RIGHT COURSE for their country, without putting the heel of class conflict upon any group of their fellow countrymen.

Box Cars Take to Wings

Huge tri-motored planes are to shuttle two-ton loads back and forth across the country. Eventually there will be a "Flying Boxcar" tieup with Europe and Asia.

Contracts have been drawn for two plane loads of flowers to be flown weekly from Los Angeles to New York. Boston may be included.

The Highway Death Toll

The National Safety Council, analyzing statistics, compares the 1935 and 1936 figures, reports 500 fewer deaths in the country, ten fewer in Massachusetts. That is progress.

Says the Council:

"Gasoline consumption is up approximately 8 per cent. Thus, while the number of accident deaths decreased only 3 per cent, the death rate in terms of travel decreased 11 per cent, which is gratifying."

Motor accidents, mostly unnecessary, can be prevented, not by statistics, but by the motorist himself. With him, rests his own fate, others' also.

A Thought for the Cape

CAPE COD summer residents hear the noise of the First Corps Cadets' anti-aircraft guns and don't like it.

Bursting shells disturb rest, excite nerves, otherwise mar perfect days. Such are the protests of opponents of the camp's strategic location.

Good—Let's Have More

THE War Department, realizing the worth of 324 military branches in 254 educational institutions, establishes R. O. T. C. units in 25 additional colleges and universities. More than 150,000 students will receive specialized training.

The Army's plan, small in comparison with the vastness of the nation, is, nonetheless, a STEP FORWARD toward an adequate national defense.

As such, patriotic Americans will approve the plan, praise what is being done, and hope for more.

France Provides an Object Lesson

Copyright, 1936, by American Newspapers, Inc.

Just how revolutionary and ANTI-NATIONAL the world-wide Communist movement is is illustrated in the following Associated Press despatch from Paris, dated July 18:

"Rightist Deputies in oven debate asked members of Premier Leon Blum's government 'if the tricolor is still the national flag and "La Marseillaise" still the national anthem.'

"A day later the Blum government officially announced that 'there was no display of tricolor in eight departments' of France, a 'very restricted display' in another, and only a 'partial display' in three others.

"Red flags flew over factories, mines, stores and naval shipyards when the occupation strike movement swept France. In towns where Communists ran the municipal government, red banners waved on city halls."

These things HAPPENED in France.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 30—Jules Glaezner has become the most spectacular party thrower on this tight—and O, how tight!—little island. He has a way of bringing Fanny Brice and a visiting Lady Vere de Vere together in a chummy, informal way in his duplex apartment in East 60th.

O. O. McIntyre

Glaezner is a closely turned out fellow. Yet he has about the hardest set of muscles in town and in emergencies packs a neat punch. He is the town's super jewelry salesman, going in only for the harter of 18 karat stones, tiaras and such.

A confirmed first nighter, he is also never absent from the opening of an auspicious cafe or the ringside of an important fight. No cinema star is in town for a half hour before Glaezner is dancing attendance. Douglas Fairbanks once said of his omnipresence:

"He must come out of the woodwork."

From a waiting divorcee:

"Have you heard about the Reno Highball? It's Scotch diluted with tears."

The passing of Marc Klaw at his home along the Sussex countryside in England revealed a strange forgetfulness in the theatrical world in which he was so long prominent.

Klaw and Erlanger was the dominating partnership of the Klaw and Erlanger when Klaw passed on many along the section observed:

"I thought he was already gone."

The reigning recluse among the cartoonists is "Skippy's" Creator, Percy L. Crosby. More and more has he withdrawn from the world to live a life of almost complete isolation on his many-acred estate at McLean, Va., near Washington.

Crosby makes the world chuckle daily but is an extremely earnest gentleman, deeply grieved by rightable wrongs. He paints so well his canvases are in many old world galleries.

Then there is the cartoon world's biggest—and quite deservedly — money maker, the blushing Robert L. Ripley. So far as is known, he is the only flimmer to reach the financial status of a millionaire.

In his 40's he could easily retire. Not to see the world, for he has poked about its oddest corners. But to play squash-ball, his favorite diversion, and do a little painting in oils, for which he also shows talent.

But "Rip" is at his drawing board every day, as enthusiastic and hard working as in the days he occupied a cubbyhole on the old Globe trying to convince indifferent editors "Believa It or Not" was a feature that could run indefinitely. They thought he might be able to string it out a year.

He has material on hand now, aside from what he has presented, to last a hundred years. And he's off now to lost places for more.

Thingumabobs: Ely Culbertson has a Russian butler who talks Weberfieldy...David Sarnoff, radio tycoon, likes to pick out his lunch in cafeteries...Roy Howard's yacht is named "Jamaroy" ...Hank O'Day, the late umpire, was never known to smile on the ball field...G. K. Chesterton liked to write with stubs of pencils an inch long...George Ade's first job was selling jokes to Ward and Vokes...Victor Herbert's daughter has garnered $200,000 Hollywood royalties from her father's famous tunes.

"Hey, buddie, you with the spats! If you had my job you'd know those things are back numbers."

'Dear Govt.' -:- By Winston Norman

Mr. Hopkins
BOON-DOGGLE DEPT.
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. HOPKINS:

I am a WPA man, can I get a 2-weak Vacation on pay, so as I can do a little work & get myself back in shape?

Mr. Hopkins, my poor old body is all wore out from doin nothin on Projeck No. 53-x-49, and I need a vacation to cure me up from the Diseases I have broke out with on the Govt Payroll, as follows:

1.—LAYING AWAKE NIGHTS. I have nearly went crazy from not bein able to sleep at night. A man can't sleep 24 hours per day, Mr. Hopkins, even when he trys. It is awful, when the 4 o'clock whissle blows and my WPA Forman wakes me up, I go home wide a-wake. I lay in bed & toss all night, with circles under my eyes. I don't get a Wink of sleep till about 9 a. m., when the whissle blows and I am back on the Projeck.

2.—DOGGELITIS. This here is a thing you get from boppin around on a WPA shovel till one leg shortens up on you. So when you start home to your wife, your long leg walks faster than your short one, you get lost goin home and wind up in Charlie's Bar

3.—RUMATIZM. Mr. Hopkins, I get a bad case of Rumatizm from settin on that damp ground 6 hours a day has got me so stiff that sometimes I need help to stand up when the quittin-whissle blows.

4—FLABBY MUSSLES. I got these things all over. My munsles has went so flabby from the last year on WPA that I got to Have a Vacation, I need 2 weaks of diggin for Angle-worms, takin Hikes, fixin my Uncle's flivver, and such rough games, so as to get my health back.

If my health returns, I figger I can live thru another year of setting on the cold, damp ground. And another reazon I want to get my munsles hard, it might kill me if Mr. Roosevelt's got beat, and I had to stop boon-doggling and go to work. You wouldn't want that to happen to me, would you Mr. Hopkins?

Pleaze answer,
W. NORMAN.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I loathe "meachers."

You know the breed. "Chronic meekies," professional squirmers, secret grievers and ear draggers, the kind who always hover on the fringe of things or crawl around underfoot, cringing and ducking.

They're always seeming to apologize for themselves, acting as if they expected a kick, which I'm all for giving them!"

Elsie Robinson

And I generally manage to see that they get it, if not in one form, then in another.

Not a Christian attitude WHY NOT?

NATURE'S FIRST LAW

Jesus Christ was never a meacher. Nor was any other inspired leader. Christ believed that human life was a holy and glorious gift. Believed, as did that old pagan philosopher, Epictitus, that each man "carries a soul within him"... a soul to be honored and defended.

SELF-RESPECT—that is the very basis of all fine philosophy, of all true religion. Self-respect is the first law of nature.

Respect yourself, not for what you have done, but for what you SHOULD and MIGHT do. Respect yourself because you are part god and should live as a god. Respect that god and make others respect it.

RESPECT YOURSELF. Christ believed in that law, taught it, fought for it—and died for it. As does every great soul. But meachers defy and disregard that law and break it hourly for their own contemptible profit and convenience.

Meachers do not honor themselves—nor the god within themselves. Meachers make a racket of dishonoring themselves—shaming and cheapening themselves and their lives.

But why should any human being wish to dishonor himself or cheapen his life?

BECAUSE IT'S ONE WAY OF OBTAINING A "PLACE IN THE SUN."

We all need expression and recognition. This is not conceit. It is a fundamental need, as natural and inevitable as hunger or thirst. Healthy humans achieve expression and recognition in healthy ways. By honest work, open battle, frank friendliness.

But unhealthy humans, in whose ranks the meachers have first place—are too lazy, too cowardly or cranky to use such forthright methods. So they—MEACH. Make a racket of humility, or timidity, or helplessness or grief. And so manage to grab the spotlight.

They do not, it is true, receive applause, but they receive ATTENTION, either in the form of pity or abuse. Either is grist to the meacher's mill. He'd just as soon—maybe sooner—be a martyr as an object of compassion. To a meacher, the nuisance value of a kick is fully as great as a dozen rounds of applause or any number of sweet, wet tears.

DESERVES NO PITY

So the meacher tribe flourishes. And there will always be certain people who, though offered every inducement to lead healthy, happy, self-honoring lives, will deliberately choose to be worms.

And should be treated as such. If a human being refuses to honor his own life, if he prefers pity to honest reward, and abuse to comradeship, he should be treated exactly as any other contemptible traitor. There may be SOME hope for a thief or murderer. But the man who will sell his own self-respect for a mess of pity is the lowest form of run-out. AND SHOULD BE GIVEN THE WORKS.

That's That -:- -:- -:- By Bruce Gustin

War-minded Japan has become air-minded. A unified command is being created for aviation units which now are attached to various army units. Plans are being made to double the army's air strength within the next few years. Japan is one country which understands that the airplane, instead of being merely an auxiliary weapon, has become the most important weapon either for offense or defense. Eventually the army will be an auxiliary of the air force.

Recently it was indicated that the Administration's alibi for repudiation of the 1932 campaign pledges would be the plea that the emergency justified this repudiation. The claim was made that there was such a change in conditions President Roosevelt had to change his program and do the exact opposite of what he had told the American people he would do. Unfortunately for the New Dealers, they can't get away with such an alibi.

More than two years ago, Postmaster General Farley, who is closer than anybody else to President Roosevelt, was quoted as saying in a speech in Detroit:

"Let me tell you there was nothing sporadic about this program, IT WAS WORKED OUT IN MR. ROOSEVELT'S MIND BEFORE HE WAS EVEN NOMINATED FOR THE PRESIDENCY. He has known all the time just what he was driving at."

The declaration of Aubrey Williams, acting Works Progress Administration head, that the only way to reduce relief costs is to "cut the people off and let them starve," puts the New Deal in another hole. After "three years" of frenzied spending we still have about as many unemployed as when the New Deal started.

Governor Landon insists the unemployed are entitled to a better future than the prospect of existing and raising their families on a dole. He also declares the cost of relief can be reduced without starving anybody. In his acceptance speech, he said: "Those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters." GOVERNOR LANDON HAS A RECORD OF KEEPING HIS WORD AND OF DOING WHAT HE SAID HE WOULD DO.

Germany got the jump on the rest of the world by being the first nation to officially recognize the new Italian-Ethiopian empire. That will help to give the Germans an advantage in Italian trade. Mussolini remembers his friends and does not forget his enemies. Eventually, other countries will have to recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. It helps neither nations nor individuals to try to shut their eyes to facts.

It must have been a shock to many American people to read that the Home Owners Loan Corporation has foreclosed on more than 5500 of its loans. A year or two ago, the New Dealers were squawking about individual and corporate money lenders foreclosing on farm lands. Legislative attempts were made to outlaw foreclosures. And now we see a New Deal agency created for the aid of borrowers foreclosing on those who are unable to pay.

No matter what happens, the tax spenders are determined to get their money. In Montclair, N. J., a new scheme has been evolved to discourage tax dodging. An ordinance has been drawn to stop residents from moving away before they have paid their taxes. Under this measure, any family planning to leave town must get a license to leave. No license to move away can be issued unless the prospective mover has paid his taxes. Any persons who moves out without a license is subject to a fine of $200 and 90 days in jail.

Today's Text: "When He was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying: 'Who is This?'"—St. Matthew 21:10. Suggested by the Rev. A. C. Neal, Congregational minister, Boston.
